U. S. Lay-Offs Of Employes To Be Barred By President

Economies to Be Sought in Other Fields, Says Roosevelt.

Workers Are Free To Enter Unions

But Collective Bargaining Is Restricted; Strike Banned.

By William V. Nessly.

President Roosevelt yesterday brought relief to the hosts of Government workers when he announced that the current drive to save at least 10 per cent of appropriations for all departments and agencies does not contemplate the furloughing or dismissing of any employes.

Then the President set out restrictions on activities of unions of Federal employes, warned there can be no strikes and no collective bargaining with administrative officers over pay and hours, but said employes may join as many unions as they wish and any employe is entitled to lay his complaints or requests before his superiors. The Government will make no contracts with employes.

Mr. Roosevelt devoted the major portion of his press conference to a discussion of the rights of Government workers, at a time when both John L. Lewis' C. I. O. and the A. F. of L., headed by William Green, are driving to increase membership in their unions within the Government service.

It was with the express purpose of relieving the minds of the employes, the President said, that he announced the contemplated savings would be accomplished in other ways than by dropping employes. One important way of saving, he indicated, would be to refrain from filling vacancies that occur. Another would consist of not rushing some work as rapidly as otherwise would be done, slowing up expenditures so that part of the work will go over into the next year.

Cites Printing Costs.

A little more care on travel expenses, and on telephone calls and printing, he said, could bring considerable savings. He stressed the amount of Government printing, which, he said, had always been too great.

Regarding the savings accomplished in the closing weeks of the previous fiscal year, the President said newspaper accounts were in error in saying only about one-third of the savings sought had been realized. He said that, as a matter of fact, the Administration came very close to its goal in that respect and added that Acting Director Bell of the Budget Bureau was preparing the exact figures.

In the first extended explanation of his views on unions of Federal employes, the President recounted his experiences when he first became Assistant Secretary of the Navy in 1913. He said that navy yard boards, under the law, had been setting pay scales to harmonize with those in similar private employment in the respective communities. Mr. Roosevelt, however, changed the practice, directing that the boards send their recommendations to him, after which he announced hearings would be held at which employes could present their cases if they disagreed with the recommendations, or present requests on working conditions. After hearings lasting several days he made some changes in the boards' recommendations and then announced the wage scales.

Holds Pay Fixed by Law.

In the same year the question arose whether the Navy Department would make a contract with the draughtsmen's union. He ruled that the Government does not make contracts with employes, that the pay is fixed by law, but that all employes should have the privilege of laying their cases before their administrative officers.

That ruling is as good today, he added, as when it was made.

He laid down the rule that any individual may state his own case, or act through a committee or as the representative of a minority or may choose a representative who is not one of his fellow workers.

Asked whether workers should have the right to strike, the President replied in the negative, pointing out that civil service rules and the low cover that point.

To a question of whether a union would destroy the rights enumerated the Chief Executive said an em-

Investigation of D. C. Airport Ordered by Insurance Firms

Improvements Urged by Rickenbacker to Save Field Here.

Announcing the launching of an immediate investigation of the airport situation here, underwriters who insure the huge transports operating in and out of the Capital entered the controversy over a new airport here last night.

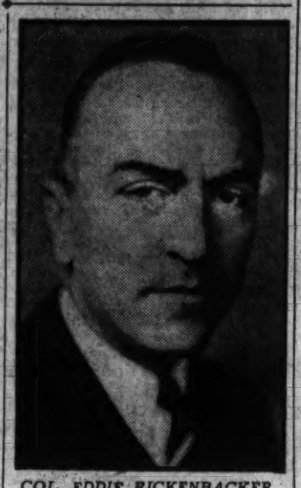
They took a hand in the local situation as the Airport Commission delayed a decision on the new site it plans to pick.

Other characters in the battle over Washington Airport, whether it could be transformed into a safe field capable of accommodating high-speed planes, were:

Col. Eddie Rickenbacker, general manager of Eastern Air Lines, most prolific user of the field, who implied that a thorough improvement program is feasible.

Manager S. J. Solomon of the airport, who said the same thing, adding that the field has a "perfect safety record."

Representative W. Sterling Cole, of New York, House minority member of the commission, who expressed the opinion that Washington Airport is beyond redemption, "which is regrettable because, if it had room for expansion, no city in the world would have an airport so ideally located."



COL. EDDIE RICKENBACKER.

David L. Behncke, president of the Air Line Pilots' Association, who echoed Cole's view, explaining that the airport is "obstruction-logged," a condition which might be relieved but not eliminated even if Military road were closed, Boundary Channel filled

2 Dead Here, Nine Overcome In Heat Wave

Painter Collapses, Dies; Girl Drowns as Mercury Soars to 94.6.

A middle-aged man and a girl, 13, died yesterday in the season's most severe and protracted heat wave that prostrated nine other Washingtonians at their tasks and forced the closing of District offices half an hour earlier than usual.

The dead:

Mary Louise Kline, 13, of 3914 K street northwest, drowned in the Potomac River, where she and her playmates were seeking respite from a blistering sun.

William F. Offutt, 57, of 3541 S street northwest, a painter, collapsed while working in a downtown hotel, dying a few minutes later of a heart condition physicians said was aggravated by the heat.

A sizzling sun boiling down through partially overcast skies shot the Weather Bureau's thermometer to a peak for the day of 94.6 at 4:40 p. m. as, about an hour earlier, the Kline girl stepped off a sand bar, lost the water wings that might have saved her and sank to her death.

The girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Logan Kline, was paddling in the Potomac near her home with her sister, Nellie, 11, and Mary Helen Garner, 8. Richard Swann, 13; his elder brother, Joseph, and Herbert Beach went to her rescue, diving several times at the spot where she disappeared.

A Harbor Police boat, operated by Private R. L. Ault, recovered the body, but too late to make resuscitation efforts effective.

The Weather Bureau last night could offer no prospect of relief. The lowest temperature during the last 24 hours came at 3:30 a. m. yesterday with a reading of 76 and

Alumnus of V. P. I. Accidentally Slain By School Friend

C. W. Caulderhead, 22, died last night at Emergency Hospital an hour after he was accidentally shot through the temple with a .22 rifle, police said, held by Howard L. Melton, 21 at the Auto Supply and Service Station at Thirteenth and K streets northwest.

Caulderhead and Melton were recent graduates of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and employed by the service station, Caulderhead as credit manager. They had been practicing the manual of arms with the rifle, witnesses said. The rifle was still in its cloth case when the accident occurred. Caulderhead lived at 1831 California street northwest.

Melton, who lives at 804 Garfield street, Bethesda, Md., was held at the Second Precinct Station for coroner's investigation, which was set for 10:30 o'clock this morning.

C. I. O. Pushes Ship Union Plan Despite Rebuff

Lewis Calls Green Charge on Steel Strike 'Droolings' of Traitor.

On the Labor Front.

The Committee for Industrial Organization, in the face of two rebuffs, called meetings to organize all maritime workers.

A call by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee for a new strike at the Republic Steel plant at Youngstown, Ohio, apparently failed. Page 2.

Lewis Answers Green.

Determinedly and defiantly, the C. I. O. pressed forward yesterday in its plan to organize a vast federation of all maritime workers, in the face of two apparent rebuffs.

Officials of the John L. Lewis organization also took time to reply spiritedly to the previous day's charge by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, that the C. I. O. steel strikes were lost through "stupid mistakes."

The day brought these activities in labor circles:

The seven-man C. I. O. committee to plan the maritime federation called a meeting in Chicago August 16 to create a national union of unlicensed seamen. It also proposed a national convention in the same city on September 20 to complete the federation.

Lewis, C. I. O. head, branded the Green attack "the droolings from the pallid lips of a traitor."

Heywood Broun, president of the American Newspaper Guild, declared that "somewhere beyond the River Styx Benedict Arnold is preparing to announce his own retirement as he cups his hands and proudly shouts: 'Gangway for William Green.'"

Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union and secretary of the C. I. O., said Green showed evidence of "suffering from the same form of dementia as Mr. Hitler," adding that "it requires a distorted vision and tortured mentality to find cause for elation in a Girdler victory over the workers in the steel industry."

Labor Despotism Feared.

Philip Murray, head of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, insisted the strike was "in excellent condition from the standpoint of the S. W. O. C."

President Roosevelt said he still desired enactment of the wage and hour legislation at this session of Congress.

Representative Cox (Democrat), Georgia, told the House that labor troubles and centralization of power in Washington are leading the Nation toward "a labor despotism."

The second apparent rebuff to the C. I. O. plan for a maritime fed-

3 Roosevelts Avoided Tax, Fish Asserts

High New Dealers and Lewis Also Assailed on 'Reliable Hearsay.'

Representative Admits Lacking Proof; First Lady Is Silent.

By Sidney Olson.

Planting a foot squarely on one of the joint tax committee's leather-covered witness chairs, Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), of New York, casually and informally argued with the committee yesterday that the following persons have used tax-law loopholes to avoid taxes:

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boetiger, the President's daughter.

James Roosevelt, the President's son and secretary.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

Former Ambassador to Turkey Henry Morgenthau, sr.

Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The wide-shouldered, long-armed Representative from the President's home district repeatedly made several related points, that he impugned no one's motives; that he had not been able to verify his information by seeing Treasury tax returns, and that he called attention to the persons on the ground that "40 Republicans and anti-New Dealers have been smeared," but only two Democrats named—Jacob Ruppert, New York beer and baseball magnate, and Henry L. Doherty, utility holding company head.

"Reliable Hearsay."

Only one committee member went after Fish. This was Representative Fred Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, one of the tax experts of the House. Vinson forced Fish to admit that his "charges" were "pure and unadulterated hearsay."

Fish later added: "Pure hearsay from reliable sources."

He insisted he had made no charges, but that rather he was calling the committee's attention to certain returns that had not yet been examined.

The joint committee on tax evasion and avoidance listened to Fish for 35 minutes without interruption. He asserted Mrs. Roosevelt signed a radio contract in 1935 under which she was to receive $1 each for 10 broadcasts and the sponsors were to turn over $3,000 after each program to the America Friends Service Committee, a charitable organization in Philadelphia.

Fish believes the income tax returns of Henry Morgenthau, jr., before he became Treasury Secretary, would show creation of family trusts used for exchange of property between Morgenthau and his wife, he said.

Accuses New Deal.

Suggesting returns of the Secretary's father, Henry Morgenthau, sr., be scrutinized, Fish said the committeemen should "see if he hasn't used the same devices so stigmatized before your committee—foreign personal holding companies—in order to avoid taxes."

He accused the Administration and Treasury, in the course of the tax-dodging investigation, of singling out "for reprisal and inquisition what may be termed, if you will, certain economic royalists."

He said money paid the Phila-

Spanish Embassy Will Pay Homage To Loyalist Dead

Commemorating the beginning of the civil war in Spain, and paying homage to the loyalist dead, consuls stationed in the United States have been called to Washington to the Spanish Embassy here July 17.

The call was issued by Dr. Enrique Carlos de la Casa, minister plenipotentiary and charge d'affaires. Consuls will come here from New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, New Orleans and Galveston.

One of the principal features of the gathering will be the presence of representatives of all organizations in sympathy with the present loyalist government.

Planes Fail, Hope Fades For 2 Fliers

Lexington Speeding to Renew Air Hunt for Miss Earhart.

Searchers Are Unable to Find Reef Where Pair Might Be.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, July 9.—Naval searchers virtually abandoned hope for Amelia Earhart today, but planes and ships continued to sweep the Phoenix Island area—and they had one great trump card yet to play.

The hunt entered its second week with three planes catapulting again from the decks of the battleship Colorado at 1:30 p. m. for a survey of McKean Island, one of the Phoenix group, deemed feasible for a "last resort" landing.

Officers aboard the Colorado expressed belief tomorrow would just about determine success or failure of the preliminary search. They figured the catapult planes, the Colorado and two other ships would complete their survey then.

Officially naval authorities reiterated hopes Miss Earhart and her navigator, Frederick J. Noonan, would be found. Privately they conceded the chances were infinitesimal.

Lexington Bears Hopes.

Remaining hopes centered mostly on the aircraft carrier Lexington, which refueled near Honolulu after a 2,550-mile run from San Diego, and prepared to speed toward Howland Island with 62 planes.

The Lexington was expected to reach Howland, more than 1,500 miles distant, some time Monday morning and immediately unleash most, if not all, of her aircraft.

The Colorado reported 38,810 square miles of the Phoenix region had been searched, but naval headquarters here estimated the planes, the battleship, the Coast Guard cutter Itasca and the minesweeper Swan, all in the Phoenix region, had covered nearly triple that area.

Even the Navy planes had difficulty in trying to find some of the reefs mentioned as possible havens for Miss Earhart's plane, which disappeared last Friday on an attempted 2,570-mile flight from New Guinea.

After three trips out from the Colorado the catapulted planes yesterday finally circled over the charted position of Winslow Reef, but found nothing.

Besides the eight Phoenix Islands, a few uncharted reefs remained to be searched.

South Seas experts said, aside from the reef and island area, the most likely chance of the fliers surviving on falling short of Howland would have been to drift with equatorial currents back toward the Gilbert Islands, 700 miles west of Howland.

Rear Admiral O. G. Murfin, directing the search from here, blocked out an area of about 265,000 square miles to be searched, including the region already scanned about the Phoenix Islands. This area consisted roughly of a quadrangle, with Howland as its center.

The Lexington's planes, supposedly capable of searching 60,000 square miles daily, planned to stay in the hunt until the carrier's gasoline and fuel oil gave out, which would require more than four days.

Discount Radio Calls.

Naval searchers discounted as worthless the reports of many unofficial listeners they had heard radio signals possibly from Miss Earhart's plane.

But Miss Earhart's husband, George Palmer Putnam, and some Government experts still adhered to the belief certain signals heard last Saturday and Sunday night might have come from the plane.

Radio Trouble Cited.

Oakland, Calif., July 9 (AP).—The Oakland Tribune said today defective radio equipment may have been responsible for Amelia Earhart's failure to reach Howland Island.

"From the start, the plane's radio was faulty," the paper said, "and Miss Earhart and Frederick J. Noonan, her navigator, were forced to fly the South Atlantic from Natal, Brazil, to St. Louis, French West Africa, with the radio not functioning, according to information received here today from Dakar, French West Africa."

Neither Miss Earhart nor Noonan knew the radio was "out" again until they landed and learned their half-hour broadcasts of positions were never picked up, the article stated.

'No Third Term,' First Lady Hopes

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 9 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said tonight she "hopes" her husband will not seek a third term as President of the United States.

She voiced her hope during a question-and-answer session which followed her address before the Franklin D. Roosevelt Home Club of Hyde Park.

B. & O. Cars Derailed At Brunswick, Md.

Brunswick, Md., July 9 (AP).—The B. & O.'s New York-to-Chicago express, pulling 11 cars, ran into an open switch as it throttled down in the yards here. Two cars, a diner and a Pullman, were derailed. No one was injured. It took about 40 minutes to clear the track and get the train under way again.

Meanwhile, Boy Scouts who had been riding on the train went to the nearby Potomac River, peeled off their clothes and took a dip.

'Miracle Man' of Golf Who Outdrove Jones, Defeated Crosby With Shovel, Held as Bandit

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 9.—Deputy Sheriff Pete Sutton said today John Montague, known as the mystery man of golf, had been arrested here under the name of La Verne Moore on charges involving the robbery of a roadhouse at Jay, N. Y., in 1930.

Sutton and Deputy J. F. McCuaig said a fingerprint check showed Montague and Moore to be the same.

"Yes," they quoted him, "my name is La Verne Moore and not John Montague. But I'm not saying anything about the robbery or about anything else until I've talked with a few people."

However, they said he later declared he was "glad it's over."

Although John Montague never entered a golf tournament, he was declared by many experts to be one of the best players in the game. He strongly resisted all efforts to photograph him and the few pictures taken were obtained by ruses.

Tales told about Montague included:

He can drive a golf ball 50 yards farther than the longest ball Bobby Jones ever drove.

He beat Bing Crosby, the film singer, who used the regulation golf clubs, with only a shovel, a rake and a baseball bat.

His best recorded golf score was 61, at Palm Springs, where he lowered the course record four times on successive days.

Claimed to have bet and won as much as $1,000 a hole in golf matches.

A copy of the indictment naming Moore, or Montague, forwarded here, showed that on the night of August 6, 1930, four masked men entered the roadhouse, bound and gagged patrons and employes, including Kin Hanna, operator, and his father-in-law, Matt Cobb, 67, took $800 and fled in an automobile.

In the getaway the automobile overturned and one of the four men was killed. Two others were caught, convicted and are now serving prison terms of 16 years each.

"I made one foolish mistake when I was just a kid," Officer Sutton and McQuaig quoted Montague. "I got into a tough gand and went wrong. I've been trying to live it down ever since.

"I've spent thousands of dollars trying to make good in the picture business or in writing.

"I was just about the place where I intended to go back East and clear the whole thing up. I'm glad this happened. I'm glad it's over."

He was booked in the Beverly Hills Jail on suspicion of robbery

Wheeler Denounces Court Bill as 'Cheap' In Three-Hour Speech

'Subterfuge' of New Deal Hangers-on Assailed by Montanan.

Sen. Minton Calls Roberts Turncoat

Proponent of Change Nearly Loses Floor as Foes Invoke Rules.

By Robert C. Albright.

His linen coat limp with perspiration from churning arms in a turbid chamber, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, yesterday opened the opposition's case against the President's court bill with a one-word epithet:

"Cheap!"

Beet-red of face, his words mingling irony with strident denunciation, the liberal leader of the opposition ridiculed the one-judge-a-year compromise and warned "those of you who rode in on the coat-tails of the President will ride out on the coat-tails of the President if that is the only reason you are here."

For more than three hours, broken only by parliamentary wrangles under iron-clad "filibuster" rules, the Montanan berated "office-holding liberals," charged a propaganda campaign of "intolerance" against Senate opponents and questioned court plan motives.

Minton Nearly Slips.

Then Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, resumed the Administration's attack on the Supreme Court and collided with the rules invoked by the leadership to break the threatened filibuster. Nearly losing the floor on a technical point, Minton was allowed by the chair to proceed.

While the Senate again locked horns over the court bill, the President told reporters he had no intention of proposing a constitutional amendment to compel retirement of justices at the age of 75 or to limit their terms of office. Widely published reports had said he contemplated such action.

All other legislation was at a standstill in the Senate, under the recently invoked rules. Wheeler blocked a unanimous consent request by Senator James P. Pope, of Idaho, to introduce a New Deal farm-aid program. Later, a ruling of the chair stopped consideration of the War Department conference report, supplying regular nonmilitary funds for a department now operating on emergency money.

With tempers already fraying after four days of debate, Senators constantly became tangled up in the resurrected debating rules—a scheme under which the Senate calendar remains motionless on the "legislative day of July 6" until the court bill is passed or defeated.

Meanwhile the House, its routine calendar nearly up to date, was resting. In a week or ten days House Leader Sam Rayburn plans to commence a series of three-day recesses or vacation periods.

Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, House rules chairman, called for adjournment regardless of the Senate court battle. He was cheered.

Undiscouraged by the Senate leadership's "rule book" strategy, estopping interruptions of Senators except for a question and permitting only two speeches on one question, court-plan opponents yesterday applied the same rules to Administration Senators again and again.

Minton Assails Roberts.

Majority Leader Robinson was denied permission to speak, "except for a question," and Majority Whip Lewis was taken from his feet when he sought to make a statement, not a question.

Finally, Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, and Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, made points of order that Minton had completed two speeches under the rules when he started to yield to Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, for the War Department conference report.

Furiously, Senator Minton insisted he had not yielded the floor. Senator F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin, presiding, upheld his right to continue. In the ensuing bombardment of parliamentary points, Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, was rushed back to the chair to interpret the Senate manual.

Minton's speech was an attack on Justice Roberts, who he said had changed his vote in the minimum-wage cases after "listening to the political voice of Chief Justice Hughes." He said Roberts had changed his mind on social security and labor decisions.

"If he can change his position in three cases, he would turn back

U. S. to Sell Gold to China, Buy Silver for More Paper Money

Agreement Revealed by Morgenthau and Kung Also Expected to Strengthen Nanking in Stand Against Japanese Encroachment.

Text of silver-gold agreement, page 7.

China's government will purchase "a substantial" amount of gold from the United States Treasury and this Government, in turn, will purchase an additional amount of silver from the Chinese government, under terms of an agreement announced yesterday.

The announcement was made in a joint statement by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Chinese Finance Minister H. H. Kung, in a special press conference in which the two officials participated after the security and commodity markets closed yesterday.

The purpose of the agreement is to increase the gold reserves of the Chinese government and thus improve the stability of that country's monetary system. In addition, the arrangement is expected to add to

Huge Harvests Of Wheat, Corn Are Predicted

Farm Bill's Chance Gains; Roosevelt Again Pledges to Urge Passage.

By Russell Smith.

A wheat crop more than 30,000,000 bushels above most optimistic previous estimates and a corn crop 1,000,000,000 bushels greater than last year are in prospect, the Department of Agriculture announced yesterday.

Conditions as of July 1 on the country's farms predicted 882,287,000-bushel wheat production and 2,571,851,000 bushels in corn output, the department said.

All other crops except beet sugar showed varying increases are to be expected.

Replenishment of the carryover of major crops, depleted by successive poor years, was indicated by the report. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace early this year appealed to the farmers to fill their bins and take advantage of unrestricted plantings.

Boost Chance of Action.

Effect of the prospective giant crops was clearly to encourage advocates of immediate action on farm legislation. Although high world prices and relaxed tariff barriers abroad are inviting heavy American wheat exports, grower representa-

General Strike Called by Paris Hotel Workers

Chautemps' Plea Fails to Renew Truce in 5-Day Week Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, (Saturday), July 10.—The Union of Hotel, Cafe and Restaurant Workers, overriding an appeal for labor peace by Premier Camille Chautemps, early today called a general hotel strike in Paris.

The action, apparently effective immediately, was voted in a midnight meeting of union delegates after a conference with Premier Chautemps who attempted to dissuade them from striking.

A strike order was issued announcing that a general strike was decided upon against employers in the hotel industry "refusing to apply a 40-hour week in five eight-hour days."

"Houses having applied the law," the order said, "will remain open."

The government decreed a five-day, 40-hour week last month. Owners, however, opposed the shorter work week on grounds that operating costs would be prohibitive.

The Premier's office announced that Chautemps had warned workers and employers of the "Immense harm" which would befall the nation from a strike or lockout at the Capital to Ban Gasoline Sale To 'Visibly' Drunken Drivers

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A new police regulation, designed to curb drunken driving on Washington streets, will prohibit the sale of gasoline to motorists "visibly intoxicated," it was learned last night.

Following a conference yesterday with Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and several wholesale gasoline dealers, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen ordered the corporation counsel's office to draft an "airtight" law.

"It is high time," said Hazen, "to remove the drunken driver from our streets. And there is no better way to halt this traffic criminal than by refusing him the right to drive."

The movement is supported by more than 600 local gasoline distributors. Placards quoting the new regulation will be posted in filling stations.

Yesterday's action was an outgrowth of a suggestion from Van Duzer several months ago. At that time both independent and large company stations agreed to cooperate.

This newest safety step was aided yesterday by representatives of the Texas, Sun, Sherwood and Lord Baltimore gasoline concerns. Other major companies, including Shell, Standard and Gulf, will instruct their employes in the new regulation.

Under the proposed law, if a motorist appears to be intoxicated when he enters a filling station, attendants will refrain from approaching his car. They will not be permitted even to offer water or air to the offending driver.

Vernon E. West, principal Assistant Corporation Counsel, who was instructed to draft the regulation, told Commissioner Hazen he felt the local courts would uphold any method of control aimed at drunken driving.

New C. I. O. Call For Ohio Steel Strike Ignored

Republic Officials Report 'Not a Man Left' Plants at Youngstown.

By the Associated Press.

Youngstown, Ohio, July 9.—A re-strike call by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee for employes of Republic Steel plants here apparently failed today.

Republic Steel officials said "not a man left the plant." Tom White, president of the S. W. O. C. lodge at Republic plants htre, contended "some men had left the plant," but said he did not have a report on the number.

A crowd estimated by Police Chief Carl Olson at 2,000 gathered at the gates at 11:30 a. m., the dead line for tht strike. Police and National guardsmen kept all moving and by noon only a few remained.

Meanwhile plans went forward for reopening of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.'s plants in northwestern Indiana. Efforts of Gov. M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana to effect an agreement for reopening were stalemated.

D. L. Ellinwood, secretary of the Association of Steel Employes, an independent union, said Frank Purnell, Sheet & Tube president, had authorized him to say the mills would reopen "within a very few days."

Nicholas Fontecchio, S. W. O. C. director in the Calumet region, said the union would oppose the move. The two plants employ normally 7,000 men.

Police reported finding six sticks of dynamite with a fuse in grass behind the C. I. O. offices near Republic's plant here.

Two hundred fifty county police replaced guardsmen at steel plants in Canton and Massillon, Ohio, but the troops were held in reserve nearby. Adjutant General Emil Marx said troops gradually were being withdrawn from the strike area.

Aluminum Company Accused.

Alcoa, Tenn., July 9 (AP).—Fred Wetmore, president of the Alcoa Aluminum workers' union, said today he would ask Gov. Gordon Browning "to use his powers" to close the plant of the Aluminum Company of America here if the latter refuses arbitration of a wage dispute.

Wetmore said the union planned to file with the National Labor Relations Board tomorrow charges that the company violated the Wagner labor act "by failing to bargain collectively as to wages and conditions of employment." Two men were killed and more than a score wounded in a battle Wednesday between company guards and pickets when the strike-bound plant was reopened after a seven weeks' shutdown. Pickets continued to surround the plant today, but there was no disorder About 200 national guardsmen remained on duty.

Steel Election Planned.

Johnstown, Pa., July 9 (AP).—Leaders supporting and opposing the steel strike mustered their forces tonight for a spirited election campaign among 15,000 Cambria works employes in anticipation of possibility of a collective bargaining vote being ordered by the National Labor Relations Board.

James Mark, white-haired lieutenant of John L. Lewis, whose Committee for Industrial Organization ordered the strike against the Bethlehem Steel Corporation mill June 11, conferred with his aides during the day.

At least two new C. I. O. organizers arrived on the strike front.

The citizens' committee leaders, who sponsored a back-to-work movement, mapped strategy to be used against the C. I. O. if an election is ordered. The company distributed pay envelopes for the second time since the strike to its employes who have been in the mills from June 12 to 26.

Oxford Movement Is 'Exhibitionism,' Its Guest Declares

London, July 9 (AP).—Members of the Oxford group were astounded today at the outspoken criticism of the noted actress, Margaret Rawlings, who was introduced as a luncheon speaker by Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman, founder and leader of the religious movement.

Miss Rawlings, as a guest of honor, was introduced as "one of the leading living actresses." Her talk followed those of a number of speakers who had been telling the gathering how the Oxford movement had changed their lives.

Almost at once, Miss Rawlings launched a bitter attack on the group system of "sharing"—a means of redemption by confession—which she described as "rank exhibitionism with a natural accompaniment of sensual satisfaction."

"To me," she told her hosts, "it is as shocking in the Victorian sense, as indecent and as indelicate as if someone were to take off his clothes in Piccadilly Circus."

Caledonia Ends Atlantic Crossing

Port Washington, July 9 (AP).—Imperial Airways' silver-winged flying boat Caledonia dropped into the waters of Long Island Sound off Port Washington late today to end the first westward Atlantic crossing of a commercial seaplane.

Officials who met the four-engined plane regarded the flight as a routine venture preliminary to establishment of regular transatlantic passenger and mail service by the British company and Pan American Airways.

Was She Wife in Name Only? Mae West Asked

Los Angeles, July 9 (AP).—Frank Wallace's lawyers announced today they will start new proceedings to force Mae West to answer the question, "Did she and Wallace live as man and wife after their 1911 marriage?"

Wallace contends they did, for four years. Miss West insists they did not. Furthermore, she adds, Wallace married another without obtaining a divorce. He is suing to have himself declared her legal husband.

'Palace Houris' Crushed When Wage-Hour Bill Is Rewritten a la Richberg.

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

Those smart young men in the New Deal to whom Gen. Hugh S. Johnson pungently refers as the "palace houris" were certainly thrown for a loss by the Senate Labor Committee when the latter virtually rewrote the Administration hours and wages bill.

That should please the general very much, except for the fact that Donald R. Richberg appears as the victor over the "palace houris." According to a report which has been around Washington for some time, Richberg undertook to write a bill providing for minimum wages and maximum hours. The "palace houris," so it is said, did not like the Richberg bill, chucked it into a waste-basket and proceeded to write their own bill.

Richberg, however, appeared before the joint hearings of the Senate and House Labor Committees in opposition to the form of the Administration measure. He outlined a much simpler method of reaching the President's objective. The Senate committee apparently was much impressed and revised the bill generally along the lines suggested by Richberg. Perhaps the next time Mr. Roosevelt will pay more attention to the Richberg efforts at the outset.

At all events, the revised bill reported by the Senate Labor Committee is a vast improvement over the original measure. In the first place, the committee cut out all the folderol in the original proposal. Secondly, the revised bill is an understandable piece of legislation. Thirdly, it is a practical undertaking to wipe out starvation wages and sweatshop hours.

As Bernard Kilgore, the capable and astute Washington correspondent of the Wall Street Journal put it, "Senator Black's revised draft leaves off, so to speak, just about where the Administration's original bill began."

The revised bill sets up 40 hours of work a week as a reasonable maximum for American industry. It leaves it up to a board to make exceptions to that requirement, except that in no case can the maximum hours be placed at less than 40. The bill also specifies 40 cents an hour as a reasonable minimum wage. Again a board can make exceptions, but in no case can a wage in excess of 40 cents an hour be required.

That is understandable and simple. American industry on the whole has progressed to a point where it can support such requirements. Under the original bill, however, the board would have had authority to set minimum wage rates as high as 80 cents an hour and it could have imposed working hours of less than 40. Through a maze of technical language the proposed board was instructed to fix "minimum fair wages" and a "maximum reasonable work week," creating an administrative problem which would have taken the heart out of a Solomon.

The difference between the two measures is that the latter is concerned primarily with stamping out evils. The original bill not only undertook to stamp out evils, but also to set up machinery to bring about righteousness. Initiation of the latter was to be undertaken before the former was accomplished—which was precisely why the NRA bogged down. But listen to Richberg, when he appeared before the committee, on that aspect of the matter. He speaks with the voice of experience.

"Let me recall," asserted Richberg, "that a similar effort was a major cause of discrediting the heroic efforts of the NRA to eradicate unfair labor competition. We found it difficult enough to eliminate indefensible wages and hours—wages that did not provide subsistence, hours that impaired health and assured inefficiency. Yet in this effort we had the support of a prevailing public opinion, of all organized labor and of a majority of employes.

"But when we were pressed to go beyond the prevention of admittedly evil conditions and to establish good—or reasonable—conditions, we found that controversies multiplied, support dwindled and the enforcement of standards that had to be compulsorily and arbitrarily established became impossible without the aid of powerful labor organization.

"As the result of this intensive experience, I became convinced that only through collective bargaining and standardization of the terms and conditions of employment through adequate labor organization would it be possible to establish reasonable wages and hours of work so generally as to eliminate unfair labor competition—in a competitive industrial system.

"Clearly the Government, assuming its legal authority, can outlaw intolerable and oppressive labor conditions. Such conditions can be defined with reasonable accuracy and their elimination will be supported by public opinion. The field of competition is thereby somewhat restricted, just as it is restricted by laws against fraud and duress. But when we undertake by law to fix and enforce reasonable wages, we must assume a responsibility also for fixing directly or indirectly reasonable prices.

"Now it may be that, to maintain a fair competition in modern industry and trade and to protect employers and workers against unfair labor competition, our Government will be forced eventually into exerting further controls over wages and prices. But, when we do go beyond the prevention of what is clearly wrong into establishment of what we think would be right, we will assume responsibility not simply for the fairness of competition but of the fairness of the results. That means not merely regulating competition but eliminating competition as the regulator of wages for the worker and prices for the consumer.

"The political economic issues of the modern world are too complex to justify any arrogance of opinion; but one can always make a choice between responsive law, whereby legal rights and obligations are rewritten under the pressure of changing social and economic conditions, and dogmatic law, whereby we seek to change social and economic conditions by writing new legal rights and obligations.

"Responsive law-making is evident today in the associated efforts of the Government to eliminate oppressive labor conditions and to support the use of collective bargaining to establish higher labor standards. We have not yet had sufficient experience in the effectiveness of these efforts to know whether they will enable us to adjust conflicts of interest in an industrial civilization by democratic processes.

"But we have ample evidence from the experiences of other nations that if such evolutionary, democratic methods do not succeed and we empower the Government to fix wages and hours of work, and thereby necessarily to fix prices, we shall find that democratic government is an inefficient instrument for the making and enforcement of dogmatic laws. Before moving in this direction it seems to me that we should at least attempt further efforts at a more democratic solution."

Deadlocked Jury Ends Pastor's Trial

Beckley, W. Va., July 9 (AP).—The trial of a mountain minister, the Rev. Monta H. Ball, on charges of killing his second wife, ended abruptly today in a hung jury.

Judge Harley M. Kilgore dismissed the panel after the foreman reported seven hours of deliberation still left it hopelessly deadlocked.

The State contended 29-year-old Mrs. Victory Gay Ball was shot last March because of jealousy and for gain.

The Rev. Mr. Ball, composed and silent while the jury reported, asserted throughout his four-month stay in jail the shooting was accidental.

The prosecutor made no statement relative to the further conduct of the State's charges against the minister.

Supplemental Budget For District Submitted

District deficiency and supplemental estimates aggregating $60,536.76 were submitted yesterday to the House by the Budget Bureau.

Items covered include $13,000 for repairs to the municipal fish market; $4,500, repair of a bridge at the District Training School; $2,000, repairs at the Industrial Home School; $39,000 for St. Elizabeth Hospital payments, and $1,990.64 for judgments and street improvements.

'Vive de la Rocque' On Ball Tossed at Blum

Paris, July 9 (AP).—An unidentified man threw a small glass ball wrapped in paper at Vive Premier Leon Blum, French Socialist leader, as he stepped from an automobile on a Paris street today.

The object failed to strike him. The words, "long live De la Rocque" were written on the paper. (Col. Francois de la Rocque is head of the rightist French Social party.)

Union Witness Collapses at NLRB Hearing

Testifies Injury During Riot at Ford Plant 'Broke Something Loose.'

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 9.—A union organizer injured during a riot near the Ford Motor Co. May 26 collapsed on the witness stand at a National Labor Relations Board hearing today.

Ralph Dunham, employed at a Yale & Towne plant here before it was closed by a sit-down strike last spring, slumped in his chair just after he testified that an attack by four or five men as he directed distribution of union handbills "had broken something loose in the pit of my stomach."

Dunham was led into a private office in tears by Trial Examiner John T. Lindsay, but resumed his story in a few minutes, seated before an electric fan in a court anteroom.

The collapse interrupted the N. L. R. B. hearing on a complaint charging the Ford Co. with unfair labor practices, at which two women had testified they were beaten May 26 when they descended from a street car near the Ford plant carrying union pamphlets.

Kicked, Woman Says.

Attractive Mrs. Catherine Gelles said she was knocked down, "somebody kicked me in the abdomen" and "three men started to beat me with their fists."

Soft-spoken Mrs. Vada Mueller said men at a street car unloading station grabbed packages of handbills from the group of women who had volunteered to distribute them, and added, "if we did not give up the leaflets, they hit us until we did."

Arnold Freeman, Detroit Times photographer, said he encountered at the Ford gates May 26 a man he once photographed at police headquarters, "I think in connection with a holdup," and that the man told him, "we were hired temporarily to take care of these union people who are coming out here to distribute leaflets."

Asserts Ambulance Refused.

Freeman also said the man pointed out as "chief of the "Down-River Gang," Angelo Caruso, sought for arraignment on an assault warrant, issued following a grand jury inquiry into the fighting.

Freeman said on cross-examination that he is a member of the American Newspaper Guild, a Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate, as is the U. A. W. A.

William Merriweather, his back encased in a plaster cast he said was necessitated by injuries he received in the fighting, said he was attacked from behind, knocked down and kicked, and that before losing consciousness he heard cries, "Kill him—kick his brains out—stamp his face in!"

Mrs. Gelles, a brunette, dressed in blue trimmed with white, said she appealed to a Dearborn mounted policeman for an ambulance for another woman unionist who was violently ill, and was told, "Let her get back the way she came. We didn't ask her to come out here."

Paper Is Published As Seattle Police Rout Guild Pickets

Seattle, July 9 (AP).—The Seattle Star published four of its customary five editions today and planned to continue publication tomorrow under protection of police, who yesterday disbanded an American Newspaper Guild picket line. The paper had been suspended since July 3.

The Star operated today with the aid of all unions, other than the Guild, and with skeleton staffs of executives manning the news, advertising and circulation departments. The Guild struck Saturday and established a picket line after a jurisdictional dispute with the teamsters union over membership of circulation employes in the Guild.

Atlanta Paper Accused.

Atlanta, July 9 (AP).—Charles N. Feidelson, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, said late today the Atlanta Newspaper Guild and the Georgia Federation of Labor had filed charges against the Atlanta Constitution following dismissal of six editorial employes. He said the complaint charged the Constitution "has illegally discharged certain of its employes because they joined the American Newspaper Guild, a labor organization."

France Sets 'Deadline' for Pact on Spain

Hints Border to Be Opened 'Within Week' Unless Powers Can Agree.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 9.—France, weary of prolonged bickering over efforts to isolate the Spanish war, today intimated that unless other powers can agree on some formula, "beginning next week," she may throw open her Spanish border to passage of arms and men.

The French stand, presented by Ambassador Charles Corbin in two meetings of the full 27-nation non-intervention committee, offered a new problem, but apparently did little to break the deadlock.

France favors the Spanish government and her threatened action would aid its cause.

The negotiators turned to Britain to urge that she put forward a solution. Thereupon rested hopes the Anglo-French and Italo-German stands could be reconciled.

Britain's task was understood to have been "assigned" by the Netherlands' member of the committee, who proposed that the Earl of Plymouth, chairman, again try to draft a solution.

Monday Is Deadline.

Corbin was understood to have warned that France will end the system of international frontier supervision Monday unless the international naval patrol is restored or British observers have returned to similar functions on the Spanish-Portuguese frontier by then.

Later, the French embassy said that Corbin did not mean a flat repeal of the control system Monday, but "beginning next week"—an indefinite date evidently intended to give Portugal time to reconsider her attitude about restoring facilities for British observers on her Spanish frontier.

The gap in the neutrality naval patrol was created when Germany and Italy withdrew from the international fleet.

Lord Plymouth, confronted with the French declaration today, indicated another meeting would be called early next week.

Loyalists Seize City.

Madrid, July 9 (AP).—Government Spain's defender of Madrid today captured Quijorna, 18 miles west of the capital.

A government communique asserted the drive also carried the Madrid troops into Brunete, important road junction 2½ miles southeast of Quijorna.

Government armies, supported by airforces, shoved their attacks deeper into insurgent territory in three directions.

One column battled southward from El Escorial, north of Madrid; a second westward from the capital, and a third pushed southward below the city.

(An insurgent communique conceded government forces gained more than four miles on the El Escorial front. It said the area, however, was "of no strategic importance" and an insurgent counter-offensive was launched to "rectify" the line.)

Three Americans Killed.

Madrid, July 9 (AP).—American volunteers wounded while fighting with Spanish government forces in the current drive against the insurgents outside Madrid reported tonight at least three of their number were killed. The dead are Jean Bronstein, David Walba and Ray Peters. At least 40 Americans were wounded.

Woman Is Accused Of Killing Brother For His Insurance

St. Louis, July 9 (AP).—Detective Chief John J. Carroll said today he had obtained a statement from Anthony R. Giancola, of St. Louis, that the latter was present Saturday when William Kappen was slain by his sister on his wedding day.

"Giancola's statement," Carroll said, "was that the shot was fired by Kappen's sister, Mrs. Marie Porter."

"Giancola said Mrs. Porter had been after him since April to kill her brother because she was the beneficiary of $3,300 in insurance on his life," Carroll continued.

Both Giancola and Mrs. Porter are held.

Pettengill Pleads For Free Courts

Michigan City, Ind., July 9 (AP).—Representative Samuel B. Pettengill (Democrat), of Indiana, said today, "Americans must insist on the independence of courts from political pressure of every kind."

Speaking before Indiana attorneys at their midsummer outing here, Pettengill, foe of the Supreme Court reorganization plan, reaffirmed his stand with the statement:

"I am as much against packing the Supreme Court or any other court one judge at a time or six or nine at a time."

Art Worth $202,000 Is Pawned for $300

New York, July 9 (AP).—Pledged for a $300 loan, 12 oil paintings and two rare manuscripts, total value $202,000, were recovered today by police in a pawnshop. They had been missing since January.

Miss Marie Warrington, of Rutherford, N. J., told police she had turned over the art objects to Gustav Nassauer, 65, for exhibition. The day after the exhibition opened, she said, Nassauer and her property disappeared. Arrested at his home, Nassauer was held in $2,500 bail on suspicion of grand larceny.

High Soviet Official Quits With Headache

House Members Assail Navy's Search for Miss Earhart as Wasteful, Inefficient.

THE NAVY furnished target practice for House members yesterday, members indignant over expenditure of "$250,000 a day" for prosecution of the search for Amelia Earhart, and members who found in failure to find Miss Earhart evidence of Navy inadequacy in the air.

Representative Scott, of California, assailed the expenditures, called the flight a "publicity stunt." Representative Faddis, of Pennsylvania, wondered if "some poor fisherman" would receive the same attention. Representative Collins, of Mississippi, wondered why "only three planes have reached the spot" in more than a week if, as he said the Navy claims, it has planes with a cruising radius of 2,000 to 4,000 miles.

ONCE AGAIN the farmer was the object of Congressional interest. House and Senate conferees reached agreement on the form of farm tenancy legislation, including a clause prohibiting farmers from selling Federally acquired farms within five years.

The Administration desires the Government to retain title to farms for a much longer period than that, hence there was speculation as to whether the President might veto the bill. In other respects the bill conforms to Administration wishes.

On the House side, a committee heard W. R. Ronald, Mitchell, S. Dak., publisher, propose a self-financing farm bill, although he did so without criticism of pending farm proposals. Ronald was given close attention as one of the small band which framed original AAA legislation.

BATTERED IN HOUSE debate, the Navy nevertheless won these new ships from Congress:

Seaplane tender, to cost $12,265,850; destroyer tender, $11,519,200; mine sweeper, $1,557,000; submarine tender, $12,606,200; fleet tug, $1,761,000; oiler, $8,496,800.

The House approved the construction authorization bill without opposition and sent it to conference with the Senate on minor amendments.

Foreign Bids Win 17 of 27 Laid-up Ships

Philadelphia Firm Gets 6 Steel Cargo Vessels for $101,000.

Foreign buyers yesterday were awarded 17 of 27 steel cargo ships sold to highest bidders by the Maritime Commission from the Government's laid-up fleet.

The vessels, built during the World War, were considered by the commission to have insufficient commercial or military value to justify their further retention. However, some of the ships are to be operated in the Chinese coastal and Far Eastern trade.

The Northern Metal Company, of Philadelphia, on a bid of $101,024.93, was awarded the Guaro and the Sag Harbor, both at Staten Island, and the Ashland County, Lake, Elsah, Lake Fernalda and Lake Flagon, all at Norfork.

Z. F. Yih, of Shanghai, for $356,370, was sold the Eastern King, at Staten Island; the Jeannette Skinner, West Harcuvar and West Nosska, all at Norfolk, and the Marne, West Munham and Westward Ho, at New Orleans.

V. K. Soong, of Shanghai, bidding $108,900, got the Kerhonkson, Shooters Island, Cranenest and Crawl Keys, all at Norfolk.

Boyd, Weir and Sewell, of New York, for an unidentified foreign bidder, got the Easterling, Easterner and Eastern Planet, all at Norfolk, for $192,057.40.

Hyman-Michaels Co., of Chicago, paid $125,330 for the Bellbuckle, of Staten Island; the Bellflower, at Norfolk, and the Federal, at New Orleans.

Douglas and Ramsey, of Glasgow, Scotland, got the Lavada, at New Orleans, for $37,149.64.

Bowring and Co., of New York, for a foreign purchaser, took the Eastern Temple, at Norfolk, for $26,000.

The Hoyne Industrial Salvage Co., of Chicago, purchased the Lake Fairlie, at New Orleans, on a bid of $6,160.

To Arnott, Young & Co., of Delmuir, Scotland, went the Coronado, at New Orleans, for $36,759.

The 27 ships together brought the Government $1,010,130.97.

Bids had been asked on 28 craft, but the Kittery, a former enemy ship covered by terms of the Washington and London naval treaties, was in a separate category. Treaty restrictions were removed shortly before the bids were opened, and the commission decided to readvertise for bids on that ship.

Duce Responsive To Briton's Plan To Guard Peace

Rome, July 9 (AP).—George Lansbury, noted British Laborite who recently expounded his ideas on how world peace can be preserved to Chancellor Adolph Hitler, tonight gave a similar exposition to Premier Benito Mussolini.

Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, also was present and after a 45-minute conference with the two Italian leaders Lansbury said he touched generally upon the question of more equitable distribution of world resources and capital and upon "genuine territorial grievances." The Laborite said Mussolini was responsive.

Former Mayor Walker And Wife Adopt Boy

Chicago, July 9 (AP).—An 8-week-old boy "with three dark hairs" was adopted today by former Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, and Mrs. Walker, the former Betty Compton. Walker said the boy was chosen as a companion to Mary Ann, 17 months old, whom they adopted at the same home, The Cradle, in April, 1936.

"He has three dark hairs, blue eyes and weighs eight pounds," Walker said. The former mayor said the boy would be named James John 2d.

Savings Cited Under Byrd's' Reorganization

HOLC, FHLB, FHA Merger Would Save 18 Millions, Expert Says.

While Administration Government reorganization recommendations jammed up behind the court bill impasse, Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, yesterday went quietly ahead with his counterproposals based on Brookings Institution studies.

Dr. Charles O. Hardy, of the Brookings Institution, was called before Byrd's Senate Reorganization Committee in support of the Virginian's bill to establish a "Federal Home Credit Administration."

Dr. Hardy said $18,000,000 could be saved annually by co-ordinating the activities of the Federal Home Loan Bank board, the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration in the proposed new agency.

Byrd had invited heads of affected agencies to be present, including Chairman John H. Fahey of the Federal Home Loan Bank board, and chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank board. Fahey said he would be prepared to testify in about ten days, after studying a stenographic report of the hearing.

Senator Byrd asked Dr. Hardy to supply Fahey with an itemized statement of savings, and said a similar statement would be supplied the FHA.

Dr. Hardy said he had found unnecessary duplication of work, confusion in the minds of the public and some competitive conflict between the FHA and other similar agencies.

He said Brookings had not studied the merit of the work being done, but believed there was not sufficient difference between the services to justify separate agencies.

Secular School Trend Assailed At U. Va. Session

Dr. Castro, El Salvador's Envoy, Fears 'Wave of Materialism.'

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 9.—Dr. Hector David Castro, Minister of El Salvador in the United States, told the Institute of Public Affairs today that for education to serve the purposes of preserving peace and making it secure, it was necessary that it counteract "a great number of tendencies and doctrines" advocated by persons participating in educational work throughout the world.

"Experience shows that in a great many instances the teachers of the secularized schools, though refraining from advocating religion, find an easy way afforded them by the laws of secularization to attack bitterly the religion that is prevailing in the nations where such laws are in force," he said.

"In this manner the wave of materialism, which is invading the whole world, presents to us the sad prospect of a future in which human passions will be set at large and human dignity substituted by the most abominable subjection to the lower nature of men."

Spencer Brodney, former Australian and British journalist, told the institute today that the basic cause of the "present impossibility of bringing about collective security" was that state sovereignty "remains an irresponsible and uncontrollable power that can and does defy and run counter to the people's desires."

Charles F. Fenwick, professor of political science at Bryn Mawr College, told the same audience the system of collective security established by the Covenant of the League of Nations failed to meet the demands put upon it because "it was deficient in one fundamental respect.

"The framers of the Covenant put too much stress upon the prevention of violence, upon the maintenance of territorial boundaries and the existing status quo," he said.

Dr. Frank A. Geldard, professor of psychology in the University of Virginia, told the conference on secondary education that educators must be psychological engineers, the Associated Press reported.

He declared their hope of having "a set of learning laws that match up with real educational situations" lies in the application of "intellectual elbow-grease on the part of experimental education."

Psychologists have persistently refused in the past to shape their "experiments in such a way as to make their findings applicable to the choolroom situation," Prof. Geldard added. "Psychology more and more shows signs of becoming engrossed in the theoretical as opposed to the practical problems of learning."

Harrison C. Lyseth, State director of secondary education for Maine, praised the role of extra curriculum activities in the modern high schools and said that "no one who has ever heard a really good high school orchestra or band or seen a school art exhibit, or the printing here, or the publications there, has ever said 'there is no education in these things.'"

F. G. Lankford, jr., instructor in the teaching of mathematics and sciences in secondary schools in the University of Virginia, saw the "decreased emphasis" on mathematics in the high school curriculum as "clearly disturbing to those interested in preserving for it the place it deserves."

In 1900, he said, approximately 56 per cent of the pupils enrolled in high schools of the United States were taking algebra and 27 per cent geometry. By 1935 these percentages had dropped to 25 per cent and 15 per cent, respectively.

Lankford proposed that the elective courses be enriched through the inclusion of material in the conventional courses that are taken from fields of applied mathematics.

Lawyers' 'Mascot,' 5, Placed in Care Of Welfare Board

"Butch," officially known as five-year-old Garnett Caudel, jr., was committed to the care of the Board of Public Welfare yesterday after being charged in Juvenile Court with selling shoe laces and razor blades on the street.

"Butch," the unofficial mascot of attorneys around Police Court, first attained notoriety a year ago when he was confined in the Receiving Home, and called bondsman Patrick F. O'Connor to get him out.

Shortly before Christmas Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, gave legal custody of the child to a Virginia family. Subsequently, however, he was returned to his parents. According to testimony yesterday, he has been allowed to run uncontrolled on the street, making the Police Court his unofficial headquarters.

Several prominent attorneys and bondsmen appeared in his behalf. F. Joseph Donohoe, Harold Hawkins, Pat O'Connor, James Caldwell, Cedric Johnson, who was defense lawyer, and others asked that he be placed in a competent home. Several said they wanted either to adopt the five-year-old or obtain legal custody.

5 Arrested Here In Gambling Raid

Five persons were arrested yesterday after a gambling raid, led by Lieut. Floyd Truscott, of the vice squad, in the 400 block of Eleventh street southwest.

James W. Gobbett, 48, of 424 Tenth street southwest; James S. Jowish, 47, of 4518 Georgia avenue northwest, and Joseph Ead, of the same address, were charged with operating a lottery. Bradford R. Glascock, 37, of 220 Twelfth street southwest, and Mac Jane Aubrey, 23, of 1008 Twenty-fourth street northwest, were charged with setting up a gaming table. All were released on $1,500 bond apiece. The hearing will be held Wednesday.

Purchase of Ten Grams Urged if Cancer Aid Measure Succeeds.

If the Bone cancer bill is approved by Congress—as is now indicated—the Federal Government will at once purchase a supply of radium to be used in a Nation-wide effort to combat the second greatest killer of mankind.

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, joined with other cancer experts testifying before the joint committee hearing on the measure Thursday to estimate that by application of knowledge already on hand national deaths from the disease could be cut by approximately 25,000 persons annually.

Dr. B. T. Simpson, of the New York Institute for the Study of Malignant Disease, told the committee that at least 10 grams should be bought. That is less than half an ounce, but it would cost the Government $200,000 at present prices—which are at an all-time low.

In all of Washington there is only between 750 and 800 milligrams of the element. This is considered more than sufficient for the city's needs.

Scarce in Rural Areas.

The element is scarce in the rural and sparsely settled States. Dr. Dudley Jackson, of San Antonio, Tex., told the committee how he had worked and saved for years to build up a supply of 50 milligrams.

"To treat the patients who come to me and whom I could help, I need at least 500 milligrams," he said.

A "census of radium" has never been taken. Even the Radiological Society of America and the Bureau of Standards do not know how much there is in America, although the amount has been estimated at 238 grams.

This supposedly is divided among 287 hospitals, 414 physicians, 9 laboratories and private industrial concerns. Approximately two-thirds of the amount is owned and used commercially.

Doctors were elated over the fact that radium is "down to $20,000 a gram." Several years ago it was listed at $50,000 a gram.

World Total 1,800 Grams.

By infinite labor and patience, something like 800 grams have been produced since Mme. Marie Curie and her husband discovered the process in 1898. Belgium, through its holdings in the Belgian Congo, is the world's biggest radium producer.

In recent years, however, the Belgian market has met a serous competitor in the Great Bear Lake region in Canada, on the rim of the Arctic Circle. This and the threat of a synthetic product are credited with cutting the price to its present level.

Dangerous to Handle.

Although one of the greatest benefactors of mankind, it is also one of the most dangerous. It was responsible for the death of Mme. Curie, and the persons who can handle it successfully in medical treatment are limited in number.

Once a doctor has a milligram of radium, he can make sure of its companionship for life. If lost, it can be found by a "radium detector"—and it never wears out. The Bureau of Standards said yesterday that it is supposed to lose only half its intensity in 1,650 years.

Dr. Parran will meet with Representative Bulwinkle Tuesday to furnish information which the Congressman said he would use in redrafting the Bone bill for a "favorable report" to the House.

In the Senate, the bill is automatically passed when the committee reports it—since it was signed by 95 of the Senators, an unprecedented incident.

Strike Wave Hits Warsaw.

Warsaw, July 9 (A).—Some 600 members of the staff of the Standard Nobel Co. staged a sit-down strike today when the employes said they learned the recent amalgamation of the company with the Socony Vacuum Oil Co. had involved a number of discharges and nonrecognition of vacation schedules.

'Heaven' Still Too Hot, Divine's Athletes Lie Down, Wait Boat

Leader Deserts Faithful to Get Good Night's Sleep; 'Celestial Olympics' Reduced to One Session of Cricket.

By the Associated Press.

Kingston, N. Y., July 9.—"Heaven" was too hot again today for energetic sports—so Father Major J. Divine's "celestial Olympics" in the 1,000-acre Greenkill "promised land" evolved into an imitation of a sit-down strike.

Worn out from a sleepless, mosquito-slapping night and a day of chanting, singing and stomping, the faithful fell upon the ground and waited wearily in the heat for a boat to take them back down the Hudson to New York City, headquarters of the colored leader's cult.

Father Divine, however, offered a sharp contrast to his wilted followers. The bald, stocky little Harlem man, called God by his followers, walked out on his disciples and angels last night for a good sleep in his Chapel street extension "Heaven" in Kingston.

After returning for a few hours today to hear his praises sung in swingtime, Divine again left the sweltering "promised land" with the assurance, "I'll see you at the boat."

With no one to shout to, the disciples and angels sank into a state of comparative lethargy.

The "Olympic games" were confined to a session of cricket played by 18 colored natives of the British West Indies.

Brother Delightful Shepherd, who said he left the isles 27 years ago and was now 72 years old, explained that the game, which lasted 12 hours, had gone only two innings.

"We didn't keep any score," Delightful announced. "The Divine Cricket Club doesn't go in for what you call competition."

Despite his mature years, Delightful said the sun didn't bother him as much as most persons because he had "lost identity with my earthly body" since joining the cult.

Approximately 1,700 of the followers who arrived in Kingston yesterday for the two-day Olympics opening the 1,000-acre "promised land" were to have returned this afternoon. Only a few of their numbers went back, however, and most of the rest waited for the night boat. The exceptions were 200 to 300 "pilgrims" who Divine said would settle in the "promised land."

St. Louis Utility Seeks Holding Act Exemption

By the Associated Press.

The St. Louis County Gas Co., of St. Louis, asked the Securities Commission yesterday to exempt from provisions of the holding company act a proposed issue of 5,000 shares of $100 par value capital stock.

The stock would be turned over to the North American Co., parent corporation of the St. Louis company, and proceeds would be used to repay bank loans and reimburse the St. Louis company's treasury for expenditures already made. The commission will hear the plea July 26.

Huntsville, Tex., July 9 (A).—Ernest McCarthy, colored, was electrocuted at State prison here early today denying he was guilty of assaulting a white woman.

State, U. S. Agencies Fight Cricket Menace

By the Associated Press.

State and Federal agencies are fighting what the Agriculture Department terms the "worst Mormon cricket outbreak in history" in the Northwestern States.

The pests are wingless grasshoppers which move in droves from mountain sections onto the cultivated crops. They gained their name because they were first reported by Mormon settlers.

height of the Paris Exposition and tourist season.

Chautemps vainly urged continuance of the truce achieved last week which averted a scheduled nation-wide lockout by employers.

Tax Boost Resented.

Meanwhile, Frenchmen grumbled tonight as they faced the necessity of drastically revising their personal budgets in order that the national budget might be balanced.

Their government, invested by Parliament with emergency powers over the economic life of the nation, informed them that beginning Monday income taxes, railway fares and other vital items in the cost of living would go up by one-fifth to one-third.

Politicians, especially of the left wing of the People's Front, moved to capitalize discontent with the cabinet of Camille Chautemps, which the People's Front as a whole supports. Communists and extreme Socialists agitated for another change of government.

The cabinet's sweeping decree announced higher tax schedules and other charges designed to raise about 10,500,000,000 francs (about $410,000,000), to balance the ordinary budget, meet railway deficits and generally cope with the financial emergency.

Grumbling against the increased imposts encouraged political movements against Chautemps. Radical-Socialist called to head the second People's Front government when the first, headed by Socialist Leon Blum, fell.

Extremists Demand Power.

Blum resigned June 21 when the Senate denied him emergency powers later accorded his successor. Extremists among his Socialist followers tonight were clamoring that leadership of the People's Front be restored to them, as largest unit in the coalition of leftist parties. This movement was expected to come to a head in the Socialist National Convention opening tomorrow at Marseille.

the forecast for today was continued fair and warm.

There was a possibility, the bureau said, that a thundershower this afternoon might bring brief respite, but thermometers north, south and west of the Capital held close to the 100 mark.

Two-thirds of the Nation yesterday suffered with the Capital. The United Press tabulated 150 heat deaths from the Atlantic seaboard to the Rockies.

The specter of drought hovered over farming sections where temperatures of 100 degrees or more were general in areas already hit by lack of moisture.

The season's record was shattered in New York City for the third successive day, the Associated Press reported. Philadelphia and Wilmington saw the mercury advance to 97.

The District Commissioners ordered all departments of the city government closed at 3 p. m.

Hains Point was lined with automobiles whose occupants sought, but seldom found, cooling breezes from the Potomac. Hundreds of residents spent the night in the parks rather than sleep at home in stifling rooms.

The list of heat prostrations follows:

Sally Whittenbery, 34, of 617 N street northwest, admitted for treatment at Casualty Hospital; Joe Harris, 39, colored, Chattanooga, Tenn., treated at Casualty Hospital and released; Charles Goodman, 30, of 904 Irving street northwest, a traffic policeman, who reported sick after working in a traffic cruiser and was taken to Emergency Hospital; Ann Kelly, 38, of 1703 D street northeast, released after hospital treatment; Mike Walsh, 35, of 922 M street northwest, treated and taken home, and Katherine Walgren, 54, of 1408 Maryland avenue northeast, released after hospital treatment.

Others overcome, whose cases were reported late last night, included Milton Gills, 18, of 836 Ninth street northeast, and Raymond Schools, 7, of 1230 Fifth street northwest, in addition to McQueen.

Improvements Sought to Save District Airport

Col. Rickenbacker Urges Changes; Pilots May Get Answer Today.

and the structures on nearby Hoover field razed.

Writing most of the insurance carried by the great airlines flying in and out of the Capital, the Associated Aviation Underwriters made public its intention to thoroughly investigate the situation here.

Meanwhile, the Baltimore Association of Commerce dispatched a representative to the District to study the situation and consider the possibility of inducing the major airlines, operating coastal and trunk systems, to make the Maryland metropolis the favored stop on airlines instead of Washington.

Eagerly awaiting the airport commission's report, although he made it clear his association is concerned only with obtaining a landing field which is safe, Behncke said he may go to the Bureau of Air Commerce today for an answer to his organization's "ultimatum."

Earlier this week the transport pilots' unit informed Bureau Director Fred J. Fagg, jr., that "insufferable conditions" at Washington Airport must be remedied within 60 days or members will refuse to land their big ships there.

Early Reply Promised.

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secrtary of Commerce in general charge of aeronautical functions, last night declared that a reply would be mailed "in a day or two."

Col. Rickenbacker proposed sweeping improvements to Washington Airport as the solution of the airport problem.

Rickenbacker's statement, made in New York, coincided with a spirited defense of Washington Airport by Solomon and an announcement by Col. Johnson that a reply will be sent "in a day or two" to the Air Line Pilots Association, which has threatened to boycott the terminal because of alleged dangers.

Other developments yesterday included:

Charles J. Horner, president of the National Aeronautics Association, said he admired the "spunk" of the aviators who land large transport planes at the South Washington, Va., field, in criticizing its deficiencies and asserted they ought to be encouraged in their fight.

Chester H. Warrington, president of the Aero Club of Washington, reaffirmed his organization's support of Gravelly Point as the site of a municipal airport, adding study had shown that location to be preferable to both the Camp Springs and Bethesda tracts reportedly favored by the airport commission.

The statements by Rickenbacker and Solomon, while not in harmony with each other, were in agreement, however, on Washington Airport's suitability if Federal sanction were given the radical alteration program planned by its manager.

"The controversy between the Air Line Pilots Association and the Department of Commerce with reference to the condition and safety of Washington Airport is not news," the wartime ace told The Post. "It has been known for several years past that this is not an A-1 airport by the pilots, Department of Commerce officials and Eastern Air Lines management.

"It has been a hard and fast rule of Eastern Air Lines that under no circumstances are any of our pilots permitted to be dispatched in or out of Washington Airport unless the Department of Commerce regulations can be observed as well as company rules."

"It is regrettable that the Nation's Capital has suffered the lack of an A-1 airport because everybody's business seems to be nobody's business. Washington Airport can be put in A-1 condition by filling up the lagoon, purchasing Arlington Experimental Farm acreage, eliminating the Military road as well as the large hangar and other small buildings, permitting hard surface runways in any direction of ample width and length to accommodate the largest of our present day planes.

Suggests Alternate Field.

"It is important that Washington have an airport in close proximity to the Nation's Capital, which the Washington Airport is, to be used for air transport operations only.

"In addition there should be an alternate field of ample size where shops, flying schools and private flying can be taken care of farther from the heart of the city, and on higher land in order also to serve air transport operators when weather is impossible at the city terminal.

Solomon, who also is vice president of the National Airport Corporation, emphasized his field's safety record, and pointed out that neither pilots nor line operators have complained to him of the port's facilities.

"Washington Airport has handled with safety up to 530 landings and take-offs per day, probably a greater number than any commercial field has ever handled," he said. "This perfect safety record has been maintained day in and day out for a period of years . . ."

The field manager agreed with Rickenbacker's suggested program of expansion, expressing his willingness to remove the Hoover field structures cited by the E. A. L. head if Government permission were granted to close Military road, which divides the two landing areas.

Senator William H. King, chairman of the Airport Commission, said last night the report may be submitted today to the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, in accordance with legislation which created the body.

With the reminder the act provides that "the commission shall preserve its decision and selection in confidence," King withheld confirmation or denial of reports the majority is in favor of operating a municipal airport in Maryland.

As long ago as May 13 The Post reported the commission was considering a dual airport plan, under which the Camp Springs site would be developed as a landing field for use at times when fog and inclement weather made operations at Washington Airport unsafe.

Foundry M. E. PulpitOccupied By 2 Visitors

Dr. G. E. Williams and Rev. W. A. Keese, Jr., Will Preach.

Visiting preachers to occupy the pulpit at Foundry M. E. Church tomorrow include Dr. G. Ellis Williams, District superintendent, and the Rev. William A. Keese, jr., minister of Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church.

Dr. Williams preaches at the 11 a. m. service on "A Universal Need." Mr. Keese addresses the evening congregation on "What Some Have Found in God."

Justin Lawrie, tenor, will sing at both services.

Wesley. The Rev. J. Luther Neff, pastor, will preach at the morning hour on "King Ai's Tree," the third in a series of sermons on "Old Testament Trees."

Dumbarton Avenue. The Rev. Walter Franklin Atkinson, pastor, will continue his sermons on "Beliefs That No One Can Afford to Ignore" tomorrow morning. The topic will be "The Truth of the Atonement." Francis Murphy will be soloist. The junior sermon will be on "The All-Star Game."

Petworth. The Rev. Robert L. Wood, pastor, continues his sermons on "Men of Power" tomorrow night. The topic will be "Joshua: The Hebrew General Who Won a Nation." Young people assisting in the first half of the service are Thornton Wood, Barbara Barnes, William Carter and Mary Jane Keely.

At the morning worship Mr. Wood will preach on "The Final Test of Religion."

Hamline. Dr. H. W. Burgan, pastor, preaches tomorrow morning on "God Is Love." John H. Marville will be soloist. The Brotherhood Bible Class will conduct religious services at the Central Union Mission July 14, August 11 and September 8. Frank L. Smith, president of the class; Edwin A. Swingle, teacher, and W. R. Schmucker, chairman of the committee on summer meetings, are in charge of arrangements.

McKendree. The Rev. Samuel E. Rose, pastor, will preach at the morning hour on "The Ministry of Mystery." Mr. and Mrs. Claud H. Ward will conduct an informal song service at 8 p. m. and the pastor will give a short message on "There Is a Calm."

Trinity. Dr. Dan L. Ennis, pastor, will have "The Resurrection and Life" as the subject of his morning sermon. "The Flaming Sword in the Garden" is the subject of the evening address.

Lincoln Road. The Rev. R. H. Stone, pastor, will preach in the morning on "The Father's House," and in the evening on "The Living Christ Faces a Needy World."

Congress Street M. P. The Rev. Hirl A. Kester, pastor, preaches tomorrow morning on "Envy." Capt. Milton D. Smith will be speaker at the morning session of the Harrison Bible Class.

Union. Dr. John R. Edwards, pastor, will preach at morning services on "Gamblers for God." A gospel service will be conducted in the evening. The pastor will preach and William R. Schmucker will lead the congregation in singing.

Metropolitan Memorial, the National Methodist Episcopal Church. The third of a summer series of sermons on "Tales That Never Tire" will be delivered by the minister, William Andrew Keese, at the 11 o'clock service. The theme will be: "Treasure Trove."

The choir has disbanded for the summer, but a soloist will sing at each service.

Today's Sermon

By Dr. Oliver J. Hart.

Rector of St. John's Episcopal Church.

Ezekiel 22:30—"I have looked for a man."

Salvation is not a matter of knowledge—it is not a matter of material wealth; it is a matter of manhood!"

"Knowledge we ask not—knowledge,
Thou hast lent,
But, Lord, the will—there lies our better need!"

The salvation of America lies in the hands of the men and women who honor and fear God and seek to do His will! In the realm of civilization we cannot dispense with the greatness of character. If a nation is right at the core, it will be right at the circumference.

There is no doubt in my heart that as goes the Christian Church so goes America! That means that there must be an element of repression and sacrifice in our living. It is inescapable in all great living. We do have our days of glorious sunshine, but we also have our nights of sorrow and doubt. There is the Mount of Transfiguration but there is also the Via Dolorosa. Unless our religion has enough backbone in it really to stand against the secular current all around us, I see no hope for the future. When we say "repression," we must always keep in mind the paradox of surrender to Christ. It means that we must go through the very narrow gate, but through that gate we enter into eternal life. That is the paradox of Christ—that surrender to Christ really means a greater life, but there must be the surrender.

The call of God to us today is to stand in the breach. The call is not for us to be paragons of excellence, but definitely to stand up on the side of Christ. We are not to have an ultra-pious or holier-than-thou attitude, what G. A. Smith calls, "a terribly northeastern exposure."

The Christian religion is not a man-made religion. It is not something that man has thought up. It is something that God has revealed. This is a moral universe; this is a God-created and a God-directed universe. We can not push aside the eternal laws of righteousness and survive. But if we hear the call of God, we can stand in the breach. God Almighty can build His Kingdom but He can only build it in humble and contrite hearts. The Voice of the Eternal is crying, "I have looked for a man!"

Frail Woman Doing Man's Job In Supervising Rescue Mission

Mrs. John S. Bennett and one of her little charges.

Mrs. John S. Bennett Steps Into Husband's Shoes When Latter Is Stricken; Also Head of Children's Emergency Home and Summer Camp.

An attractive Washington woman, a former president of the Women's City Club, today is boss of a rescue mission for derelicts which serves 133,000 free meals and gives free bed shelter to more than 50,000 men a year.

She is Mrs. John S. Bennett, who has been carrying on for her husband as superintendent of Central Union Mission ever since he was stricken with a heart attack December 5, 1936.

Looking after the hundreds of down-and-outers who seek aid at the C street mission daily, helping them find work, overseeing the administration of the seven-story building's pay dormitories, supervising activities at the mission's farm in nearby Maryland, conducting a weekly radio program—all this besides her regular duties as director of the Children's Emergency Home and its free summer camp—hers is a responsibility which is probably unique in the nation today.

When "Father Bennett," as he is known to his constituents, was stricken seven months ago, his wife took over the heavy administrative burden as a matter of course. Previously her only duties, which draw no pay, were as the director of the home's juvenile activities.

Operate Summer Camp.

Several score boys and girls are permanent residents of the Children's Emergency Home, which occupies the Indiana avenue side of the building. Then, too, every two weeks during July and August the mission ships 88 underprivileged youngsters, ranging from 6 to 12, to the free summer camp at Brookeville, Md.

As acting superintendent of the whole works, Mrs. Bennett has had to give up all active outside club work, but she isn't complaining. Adversity is no stranger to the Bennetts, whose romance began in a New York rescue mission when both were neophytes in uplift work, and "Father's" heart attack was just one of those things which must not be allowed to obstruct the job at hand.

"It's harder to keep that man in bed," says Mrs. Bennett, "than doing all this extra work."

Must Take Life Easy.

Doctor's orders are that he must humor that misbehaving heart, though he is allowed to walk around a bit if he doesn't overdo it. Until he returns to his usual Irish self, jocular and wise cracking, the missus expects to keep her frail shoulder to the wheel of "The Mission of the Churches."

Homer A. Rodeheaver, nationally known evangelist and one of the couple's most intimate friends, gave Bennett a dose of his own gospel when he fell ill. Rodeheaver sat down and wrote a song dedicated to his buddy, entitled "Keep Your Chin Up"—the lyrics go:

"Turn up the corners of your mouth, and keep your chin up, too,
"For you never can tell what a smile may do;
"It may lift another's load as he journeys down life's road.
"Keep the corners of your mouth, and your chin up, too!"

Bennett, more accustomed to dishing out that sort of kind advice than taking it, swallowed the medicine with relish, according to his wife. Of course, he more or less has to, otherwise he would be "on the spot" with the possessors of those thousands of chins that he has elevated since the Bennetts came to Central Union Mission in 1915.

Started Work in 1907.

Mrs. Bennett was starting out as a volunteer rescue worker when she left her Philadelphia home in 1907 for New York, there to meet a young convert named John S. Bennett, from Hartford, Conn. A few years later they were married.

When they came to Washington, it was to no such modern mission that is in operation today. Rats overran the old place and Superintendent Bennett never failed to place a club under his pillow before he went to sleep. His wife, too, soon became adept at rodent slugging.

They had been here only a year or so when they took in two little girls to prevent them from becoming public charges. That act of mercy turned out to be the nucleus of the mission's children's program—the Children's Emergency Home, the free summer camp and the distribution of toys at Christmastime.

Now By Enterprise.

At the 1935 Christmas party, held at Loew's Capitol Theater, goody bags were distributed to 1,550 needy boys and girls, with Mrs. Roosevelt assisting in the ceremonies. Every First Lady since Mrs. Harding has participated in these annual affairs.

"Little did we realize that our volunteer mothering of those two children," says Mrs. Bennett, "was to mark the beginning of a work so great and so all-encompassing as has become the Children's Home and Camp Bennett. Those days of concern, filled with work and worry, seem to us now much like a dream, for the makeshift facilities we worked with then have been replaced."

Maryland Lacks Funds to Battle Japanese Beetle

Without funds to fight the pest, Maryland is faced with a serious invasion of the dread Japanese beetle, Dr. Ernest N. Cory, State entomologist, declared yesterday.

The greatest damage so far, Dr. Cory said, was in Baltimore City, Cambridge and Elkton. However, he said, the pests are appearing in limited numbers in other towns.

The Eastern Shore, he said, shows the effects of the insect invasion. Flowers, grapevines and various fruit trees are being destroyed or badly defoliated. Dr. Cory and Dr. George S. Langford, specialists in insect control at the University of Maryland, have just returned from the Eastern Shore.

Dr. Cory said money to combat the insects would be available in 1938 and 1939.

Colored Musicians' Aid To Be Planned at Church

A meeting in behalf of the scholarship fund of the National Association of Negro Musicians will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in Metropolitan Baptist Church, 1225 R street northwest. The speakers will include C. C. Cappel, manager of the National Symphony Orchestra, and Todd Duncan, barytone, and faculty member of Howard University school of music.

Encouragement and assistance of talented and deserving young colored musicians are among the purposes of the association which has held 17 annual conventions in the larger American cities. Marian Anderson, the now famous contralto, was one of the beneficiaries of the scholarship fund. Among others who have been aided are J. Harold Brown, winner of several prizes in composition; Margaret Bonds, who appeared as soloist with the Chicago Orchestra; and Thelma Ingram, now studying in the Juilliard Graduate School.

Services at Memorial.

Dr. S. B. Daugherty, pastor at Memorial United Brethren Church, will preach at 11 a. m. on "I Obtained Mercy." Vespers will be at 7:30 p. m., with message from Dr. Daugherty.

Brown Praised By Roosevelt For Scout Aid

President Also Discusses Boys Club Work With Police Head.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, was commended personally by President Roosevelt yesterday for his department's handling the Boy Scout Jamboree.

It was the first time within the memory of local officials that a President ever summoned Washington's police chief for a personal White House chat.

The President, Maj Brown reported, was interested primarily in activities of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club. He praised Maj. Brown as founder of the club and said "we would have nothing to fear from future criminals if there were more such organizations."

An invitation to visit the police boys' club camp in St. Mary's County, Md., will be extended to the President, Maj. Brown said.

The White House call came shortly before noon yesterday. The President, Maj. Brown was told, wanted an "informal discussion" of the boys' club movement.

Mr. Roosevelt said he was promoting a similar club in the Adirondack Mountains and wanted to know the Major's formula for successful operation of the local organization.

The President, Maj. Brown said, finally changed the subject and congratulated District police for the orderly handling of all details attending the Scout Jamboree.

"In fact, I have heard nothing but praise for the Washington Police Department in all its undertakings," the President was quoted as saying.

A total of 8,300 boys, Maj. Brown told the President, are registered with the police club. Seventy-six each week are attending Camp Ernest W. Brown in Southern Maryland.

"The President was keenly interested in every type of youth movement," said Maj. Brown. "We discussed the Boy Scouts, Civilian Conservation Corps and various other youth organizations."

'Jesus' Crosses' Sermon Topic For Dr. Pruden

Chaldean Sheik to Discuss His People Tomorrow at First Baptist.

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor, will give a sermon on "The Crosses of Jesus" at 11 a. m. services tomorrow in First Baptist Church. The Lord's Supper will be observed.

In the evening the minister will take as his sermon subject, "When One Comes to Himself."

Sheik Rafael Emmanuel, a native of Ur of the Chaldees, will discuss the customs of his homeland at the Thursday evening meeting.

Dr. Pruden will deliver a series of talks on "Baptist Youth Mission Program" at the Maryland Baptist Summer Assembly meeting in Braddock Heights next week. The board of deacons meet in the church Monday night.

Fifth Baptist. Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "When Jesus Came," and at night on "The Life Motto of the Apostle Paul." Dr. Thomas Browne will teach the Berea Bible Class.

West Washington. The Rev. C. B. Austin, pastor, will preach at morning services tomorrow on "The Most Important Thing in the World." Evening preaching services have been discontinued for the summer.

Chevy Chase. The Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor, will give a morning sermon tomorrow on "Sampson and His Folly." At 7 p. m. the church will participate in union vesper services on the lawn of All Saints' Episcopal Church.

Metropolitan. In the absence of Dr. J. C. Ball, pastor, the pulpit will be occupied tomorrow morning by Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives. His theme will be "Some Little Journeys." In the evening Dr. Montgomery will give a talk on "The Cloud Out of the Sea."

Takoma Park. The Rev. William E. LaRue, pastor, will speak on "Gems From the Psalms, No. 2," at the morning service.

Hyattsville. Dr. B. P. Robertson, pastor, will preach a morning sermon on "Unloading Our Cares." In the evening his topic will be "The Assurance of Life."

Dr. Alvin Gregory Funeral Is Today

Funeral services will be held today at the Church of St. Stephen at 9:30 a. m. for Dr. Alvin T. Gregory, 77, who died here Wednesday. Burial in Oak Hill Cemetery will follow.

A member of the first high school class in Washington, the class of 1878, Dr. Gregory had been a Government employe for more than 50 years, most of which was in the Treasury Department. Also active in church activities, he worked for the organization of the Episcopal Church Home and acted as secretary and historian for that institution until January.

Dr. Gregory also served as vestryman and superintendent of the Sunday school of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and later became superintendent of the Sunday school of St. Stephen's and the Incarnation.

His wife, Mrs. Rowena Howell Gregory, and two daughters, Miss Josephine Gregory and Miss Florence Gregory, of Washington, survive.

Cleaners, Owners Negotiate Today

Negotiations between striking cleaning and dyeing workers and individual plant owners were to get under way this morning, Calvin Cousens, president of the union, said last night.

He believed several of the plant owners were ready to break away from the committee of plant owners, headed by Samuel Rubinstein.

Pressure for a speedy settlement of the strike has been brought to bear on plant owners by the Retail Tailors Association, the Woman's Trade Union League and the League of Women Shoppers.

Cousens believed he would be able to report several settlements when the strikers gather for a mass meeting in the Murray Casino at 4 p. m. tomorrow. He said the union has sufficient funds to continue relief for strikers through next week.

Capt. R. J. Merrick, Of Cavalry, Is Dead

Capt. Robert J. Merrick, Cavalry, U. S. A., died at Fort Banks, Mass., Wednesday, the War Department announced yesterday.

Graduating from West Point in 1919, Capt. Merrick made a tour of Belgian, French and Italian battle fronts and visited the Army of Occupation in Germany the same year.

After serving at Camp Stotsenburg, P. I., Capt. Merrick was on duty at headquarters, First Corps Area, Boston, Mass., at the time of his death. He graduated from the Cavalry School, basic course, Fort Riley, Kans., in 1920.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth K. Merrick, of Cheyenne, Wyo., and a brother, John Norman Merrick, who is en route to Hawaii.

CCC Aide Speaks To Camp Advisers

J. J. McEntee, assistant director of the National Civilian Conservation Corps, spoke yesterday at a luncheon at the University of Maryland in connection with the third annual conference of camp educational advisers from Pennsylvania, Maryland, and the District of Columbia.

He referred to the CCC as "something new under the sun" in that it is the first attempt in this country to co-ordinate the activities of several Federal departments.

McEntee opened an exhibit of 5,000 selected entries made by enrollees in the CCC in connection with its educational program.

Science Topic For Tomorrow Is 'Sacrament'

Golden Text for Sermon Taken From Revelation 7:13, 14.

"Sacrament" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Revelation 7:13, 14: "What are these which are arrayed in white robes and whence came they? . . . These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David." (Isaiah 55:3.)

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "When divine Science overcomes faith in sin and in material methods of healing, then sin, disease, and death will disappear."

School Aims To Be Stressed By Churches

Special Services for Washington and Takoma Park Adventists.

Washington and Takoma Park Seventh-day Adventist churches will join with other denominational churches in the United States and Canada today in the observance of Educational Day. More than 120,000 youth and children of school age are involved in the plan of getting every child in the denominational families enrolled as students in the denominational schools.

According to Dr. J. E. Weaver, associate secretary of the department of education, the leaders of the church "should work diligently for our young people while we have the opportunity, because the day may not be far away when some of the blessings that we are enjoying in free America will be a matter of history."

According to Prof. Harvey A. Morrison, secretary of the educational department of the General Conference, which has supervision over the chain of colleges, academies and elementary schools operated by the church throughout the world: "The purpose of this educational day is to focus the attention of parents, church members and young people upon the importance of Christian education, and to instill and strengthen in the mind and heart of each one the fact that this great plan of Christian training for our youth is from God, and under His promised blessing will be the means of saving of our children and young people."

'God's Highway.'

The Rev. Tillman R. Braddy, pastor, will preach in Takoma Park Community Church tomorrow morning on "God's Glorious Highway." Topic for the evening hour will be "All Star Christians."

Skippers of Tomorrow and Miniature Ships Compete on a Tiny Ocean

Post Staff Photos.

The sea was the pool at the Langdon Park Playground. The day was hot, but who cared? The youngsters who entered the miniature boat regatta forgot the heat, as good sailors should, and let their craft go in the light, sultry breeze, which might as well have been a trade wind in the days when sturdier mariners sailed around the Horn. At the left is the start of the boat race and in the center are three of the winners and their vessels. Left to right they are William Deffer, 10, of 214 Channing street northeast, winner in the performance class; Billy Sessun, 15, of 4520 Ivy street, Brentwood, Md., winner in the time race; and Robert Klopfer, 9, of 3208 Otis street, Mount Rainier, Md., winner in the beauty class. It was not all hard work yesterday, either, still seas or no, and at the extreme right some of the contestants and others are cooling off.

3 Roosevelts Named by Fish As Tax Dodgers

'Reliable Hearsay' Offered Against New Deal Heads and John L. Lewis.

delphia committee under terms of Mrs. Roosevelt's radio contract was earned by her "as much as money ever was earned by anybody."

Revenue law permits deductions up to 15 per cent of a person's income for contributions to charity.

Asked about Fish's assertions at a press conference, President Roosevelt said he would not discuss them at present. Aides quickly added he had no intention of ever replying.

Denied by First Lady.

Mrs. Roosevelt herself told reporters recently:

"On every penny of income which I received, I have paid my tax."

After the committee session, Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, remarked:

"If Congressman Fish believes that the case he presented of Mrs. Roosevelt . . . is on all fours with the nefarious and indefensible cases presented before this committee on tax evasion, he has had a brainstorm."

A Paul Harding, attorney for the New York Sun, told the committee members of the family of William T. Dewart had not diminished, evaded or avoided taxes.

He replied to references previously made at the committee's hearing to the Dewarts and New York Sun, Inc., a holding company.

First Lady Consulted Treasury.

Philadelphia, July 9 (AP).—Clarence E. Pickett, executive secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, commenting on the funds given to the committee as brought out in a Congressional investigation at Washington today, said Mrs. Roosevelt had consulted the Treasury Department before making her arrangements with the sponsors of her radio talks.

"Every nickel Mrs. Roosevelt has received, approximately $100,000 in all," he said, "has gone to our committee. Mrs. Roosevelt has not touched this money; it came to us directly."

Darby Admits Rumors.

New York, July 9 (AP).—Ered W. Darby, public relations counselor of Rockefeller Center, today identified himself as the person who told Representative Fish he had heard "rumors only" that members of the Roosevelt family had holding companies in the Bahamas.

"I did not tell Mr. Fish I had any photostatic copies of such records, nor did I say I had any records of any other kind," Darby said.

225 Get Training In Coast Artillery

Coast Artillery training is being received by 225 candidates from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia at the Citizens Military Training Camp at Fort Monroe, Va. The camp, which is commanded by Col. E. W. Thomson, of Annapolis, Md., will be in session until August 5.

Entertainment, including sightseeing trips, smokers and dances, is under the direction of Lieut. J. W. Bates, jr., while the athletic program is under the supervision of Lieut. C. S. Ingle. Religious activities are under Maj. T. F. Ripple, chaplain.

The 26 candidates from Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia are:

Robert Dixon, George W. McCauley, Arthur F. Snee, Edward A. Sweeney, Barton V. Daniels, Douglas Custer, Saunders Hornbrook, Arnold J. Grantham, Richard D. Brady, Charles F. Coffey, Dougall McCallun, Robert Cantwell, Kyle F. Beaghon, Robert Kilby, C. Samuel Iden, Robert H. Kollinger, Jackson A. Cooper, James F. Hough, Howard P. Handran, Robert A. Herring, jr., A. Ross Holes, Earl Conway, Harold E. Earp, jr., Francis J. McDonald, John Toomey and Thomas E. Fitzpatrick.

Honor Student Accused By Girl, 9, as Assailant

Chicago, July 9 (AP).—Nine-year-old Lorraine Hundreiser, near death from 34 stab wounds, today identified John Ardelean, 17, high-school honor student and athlete, as the man who lured her into a basement last night, stripped her, attacked her with a knife and assaulted her.

Ardelean previously had confessed the crime. The girl's father, Henry Hundreiser, lunged at the youth when he was brought into the hospital room where his daughter lay. Police restrained him, however, after he had struck only one blow.

600 May Strike Against Nonunion U.S. Building Help

A strike which might involve most of the building trades work on Government projects in the District was forecast last night by Bryce P. Holcombe, business manager of the Painters and Decorators Union here, if nonunion help is allowed to start work Monday on the City Post Office and Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The firms holding contracts are William Wilson & Son of Atlanta, Ga., for work on the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and Counes & Raptis, of Brooklyn, N. Y., for the Postoffice.

C. I. O. Pushes Ship Union Plan Despite Rebuff

Lewis Calls Green Charge on Steel Strike 'Droolings' of Traitor.

eration came in the 2-to-1 vote by membership of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific against joining the Lewis organization. A favorable vote had been taken for granted here, as heads of the various units making up the Pacific federation had recommended affiliation upon their respective groups. Lewis was of the opinion, after word of the adverse vote at the Portland (Oreg.) convention had been received, that the West Coast workers merely wanted some change in the mechanics for affiliation. John Brophy, C. I. O. director, recently made an extensive tour of the West Coast in the interest of uniting the various units there with the C. I. O.

C. I. O. Group Assailed.

Only the day previous, Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, had severely criticized membership of the C. I. O. committee named at a conference here to draft plans for the Nation-wide federation of marine and fishing workers. The committee yesterday named a three-man group to visit Ryan in New York with a virtual ultimatum that if he refuses to accept the committee terms, the C. I. O. immediately will issue an international charter to the Pacific Coast district of Ryan's union, headed by Harry Bridges, and make that group the C. I. O. implement for organization of all longshoremen on both coasts, the Gulf of Mexico and the Great Lakes. On the sub-committee are Bridges and Mervyn Rathborne, president of the American Radio Telegraphists Association, both of whom Ryan severely criticized on Wednesday, and Joseph Curran, general organizer for the National Maritime Union.

Invited to the September convention would be "all existing C. I. O. or progressive unions of longshoremen, seamen, licensed deck officers, licensed engineer officers, radio operators, shipyard and ship repair workers, fishermen and inland boatmen."

Women Organizers Ejected.

Memphis, Tenn., July 9 (AP).—Officials of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union made numerous telephone calls tonight in an effort to locate Miss Ida Sledge, Memphis union organizer, and her assistant, Miss Josephine Smith, of Forrest City, Ark., who were escorted out of Tupelo, Miss., late today. The union was informed the ejection followed a secret meeting of business men earlier in the afternoon.

ployе may join any union he chooses or ten unions, but no representative of a majority may be the sole bargaining agent for all the employes.

The reminder that Congress fixes pay rates brought the question whether employes are to be permitted to bring pressure to bear on Congress to raise pay or reduce hours. The President replied that was up to Congress and the Civil Service rule. The law permits employes to petition Congress or members of Congress or give information to members or committees.

Almost immediately, statements came from heads of the two rival unions, the American Federation of Government Employes, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and the United Federal Workers of America, the new union backed by the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Charles I. Stengle, president of the A. F. G. E., sent a telegram to the President congratulating him for his stand that savings shall not be made by dismissing employes.

"This splendid humanitarian attitude is not only indicative of your sympathy with the working men and women of this country but reveals sound economic and social insight," the message said.

Stengle said the Federation favors "the most economic and efficient operation of the Government service." He held efficiency and economy depend largely upon the morale of employes, and deplored personnel or pay cuts, "which have been proved by experience to be destructive to morale."

From Jacob Baker, president of the U. F. W. A., came this statement:

"The national officers and organizers of the United Federal Workers of America share the President's view that a system of adjustment of wage and working conditions is as necessary now as it was in 1913, when the President, as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, first established it there. Government workers not only have the right to be heard, as the President said, but the United Federal Workers feel a responsibility for the organization of unorganized workers so that they may be heard in discussion of working conditions and the settlement of any problems that may arise. The range of such discussion, while limited by law, is as extensive as is the range of administrative discretion, and a great deal of effective work can be done in benefit of the public service and improvement of the conditions of the workers."

The National Association of Manufacturers issued a statement commending the President's statement "on the impossibility of collective bargaining between Federal employes and the Federal Government," but deploring "woeful defects in the National labor relations act."

The association said that "as the law stands, no matter what the President's attitude may be, there is no general Federal statute which specifically forbids strikes against or picketing of Government agencies." It called for legislation to make unions responsible, prevent coercion of workers from any source in the matter of joining unions, and restrictions on sympathetic or general strikes.

20 Scouts Remain in Hospital While Mates Leave Jamboree

Malaria Victim Overjoyed to Get Eagle Badge; Massachusetts Delegate Blames Accident on '13' Jinx, Has Plenty to Amuse Him.

The Jamboree is not yet over for about 20 Boy Scouts, who lay in Naval Hospital as their troopmates started home yesterday. Their ailments range from sore throats to a ruptured spleen. None is in a serious condition, and all will be released within two or three weeks, according to Dr. W. L. Smith, chief medical officer of the Jamboree.

Happiest of the invalids yesterday afternoon was 13-year-old Holton E. Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Harris, of Shreveport, La.

Prevented by malaria from receiving his Eagle Scout badge at one of the formal presentations, he got the badge anyway. Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive, visited him in his hospital ward yesterday and personally presented him with the silver medal.

Holton's mother had come from Shreveport that morning and was present at the ceremony. He hopes he will be able to sail for Holland July 14 with the rest of the World Jamboree delegation.

Unhappiest of the patients was an unidentified lad who sat bolt upright in bed with his blond hair tousled, his face hopelessly despondent and large tears running down his cheeks.

Unluckiest of the boys is Stanley (Buddy) Brown, jr., of Marblehead, Mass. Buddy's name has 13 letters, he is a member of Troop 13 and he is 13 years old.

That's how he accounts for the fact he ruptured his spleen rather than just bruising his ribs when he fell over the rungs of a swimming pool ladder last week.

Buddy has kept his sense of humor, even though his doctors were not sure for a time whether he would pull through. When he saw a headline in a Boston paper announcing he had a 50-50 chance, he exclaimed, "Gee, this is the first time I've been worried."

Plenty to Amuse Him.

A nurse, assigned to him as his condition grew more serious, asked where his home was? "Marblehead," said Buddy, "and that's where I come from, not what I'm here for."

His parents are with him to help keep him amused. The nurses and other attendants around the hospital also stop in at his private room fro a chat. And then there's Oscar, his horned toad; the funny papers his sisters sent from home; two books given him yesterday by Representative George J. Bates, of Massachusetts, and a large number of humorous "get well" cards from his friends.

He'll have only three days of Jamboree to tell about when he goes home next week, but, as his mother reminds him, he can always talk about his operation.

D.C. Home Rule Given Support By Palmisano

Tells A. A. A. Group Residents Are Entitled to Laws They Want.

"Home rule" for District citizens was supported by Representative Vincent L. Palmisano, chairman of the House District Committee, in a talk to the advisory board of the American Automobile Association at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel yesterday.

He declared the people of the District are "entitled to legislation which they consider beneficial," and said any belief that members of Congress are hostile to the District is unfounded. His talk was one of the first he has given since becoming chairman of the District committee.

Russell E. Singer, general manager of the A. A. A., said there had been an increase of 10 motor fatalities and 485 persons injured in Washington during the first six months of 1937, compared with the same period a year ago.

He suggested "immediate improvement in our Traffic Court procedure, possibly through reinstitution of night services, legislation to provide for compulsory inspection of motor vehicles, education of pedestrians to the need of obeying traffic signals and crossing streets at intersections, and a well-organized accident protection squad to investigate causes of accidents for use in preventing similar accidents."

He said there was need for comprehensive traffic planning for the future, and said the District should have Federal aid for highways.

and on the Essex County, N. Y., warrant.

For many months Montague made his home with Oliver Hardy, film comedian. At intervals he would leave town, the officers said, presumably going into the desert, where he was reputed to own a gold or silver mine.

Standing 5 feet 10 inches and weighing 220 pounds, Montague is said to have demonstrated his great strength in locker rooms at the Lakeside Golf Club, disposing of as many as six opponents simultaneously in wrestling and fisticuffs.

Another tale is that when he and the giant George Bancroft were tussling in a locker room, Montague picked up the actor, thrust him neatly into a steel locker and closed the door.

This tale Montague told himself:

"I was playing in a foursome at the Fox Hills Country Club. At the tenth tee, I said to the others: 'See those birds on that telephone wire? Watch me pick off the one farthest to the right.'

"I teed up on old ball, took a brassie and hit a full drive. It truck the bird in the neck, snapping its head off—170 yards away."

Blast Fumes in Cave Fatal to Ex-Athlete

Harmony, Minn., July 9 (AP).—Fumes which formed following dynamite blasting in a cave he was attempting to develop into a tourist attraction were blamed tonight for the death of Carl Schjoll, 38, former University of Minnesota athlete.

Schjoll, who became widely known as a javelin thrower at Big Ten and A. A. U. track meets, died this afternoon while exploring the cave in which dynamite was set off last night in an attempt to enlarge the natural labyrinth. The body was brought to the surface after rescue workers pumped the gas from the cave.

Repeal Called 'Failure.'

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 9 (AP).—Calling "the growing menace of liquor a challenge to Christian citizens," Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, said tonight that "repeal has been and increasingly is a tragic, monstrous failure." Dr. Poling addressed the thirty-sixth international Christian Endeavor convention.

Boy Scouts Bid Good-by to D.C. As Camp Ends

Thousands Quit Jamboree Tent City as National Rally Closes.

"Jamboree is dismissed!"

Three buglers had sounded retreat, to the colors and taps. Six more Scouts had lowered the Stars and Stripes and the purple Boy Scout flag from poles at the head of the Avenue of Flags. Maj. G. W. Bryan's command formally ended the ten-day cavalcade of Scouting which brought to Washington 24,021 boys from all parts of this country and 25 others.

As the two huge flags fluttered down and were folded, the buglers struck up "Auld Lang Syne."

Even before the flag-lowering ceremony at 2:30 p. m. yesterday, the homeward trek had begun. Ninety-two special trains rolled out of District stations Thursday. Sixty-two more left yesterday.

Less than 1,000 Scouts will be left in the District for the week-end. Even the 812 boys who sail from New York July 14 on the Normandie for the World Jamboree in Holland will spend the five-day interval at their homes or in New York.

Yesterday the tent city resembled an army camp which had just received marching orders. Everywhere boys were assembling packs and piling them on buses. Troop flags were lowered at the same time the official closing ceremony took place on the Avenue of Flags.

The 12,000 Scouts who left yesterday crammed as much as possible into the last few minutes.

The final thrill for a group of Indiana boys was a tour of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, personally conducted by Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Commissioner George E. Allen, chairman of the President's Special Jamboree Committee, paid his last visit to the grounds just before the flag-lowering. He congratulated all concerned with the success of the Jamboree.

Among the first contingents to leave Thursday was a group from Fox River Valley, Wis. Five hundred Minnesota boys, who do not leave until 1 p. m. Monday, will be the last to evacuate the camp.

Tennessee Group Honors McKellar For Record Term

In recognition of his services "in having been in the Senate longer than any other Tennessean," Senator Kenneth D. McKellar was honor guest last night at a dinner given by the Tennessee Society at the Mayflower Hotel.

Judge Finis S. Garret, of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, was toastmaster and Edwin L. Davis, of the Federal Trade Commission, was principal speaker. Jack W. Gates, president of the society, was master of ceremonies.

Seated at the honor table—and also making brief speeches—were: Postmaster General Farley, Attorney General Cummings, Assistant Postmaster General Smith W. Purdum; Senator John Bankhead, of Alabama; Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, civil service commissioner; Senator Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania; Senator George L. Berry, of Tennessee; Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana; Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada; Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, of Mississippi; Jesse Jones, head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General; Karl Crowley, solicitor for the Postoffice Department.

Medical Center Bill Passes House

The House yesterday passed without substantial opposition a bill authorizing construction of a new Naval Medical Center at a cost not to exceed $4,850,000.

The measure, reported by the Naval Affairs Committee, authorizes the Secretary of the Navy to acquire a site and build the Medical Center and Dental School. While no site is specified, the Navy Department is reported to be favorable to a location in nearby Maryland.

Sponsors of the bill could not predict yesterday whether a deficiency appropriation will be obtained at this session to start work on the hospital this year because of the uncertainty as to whether the measure will be acted on by the Senate.

8 of 20 Pass Dentists' Test Of D. C. Board

10 of 11 Successful in Examination for Hygienists.

Eight new dentists and ten hygienists completed qualifications to practice in the District by passing the dental board examination in June, it was announced yesterday by Dr. E. M. Colvin, jr., secretary and treasurer of the Board of Dental Examiners of Washington.

Out of 20 who took the examination, 8 men passed the dentist's requirements. They were: Dr. William L. Alexander, 1424 Varnum street northwestfh Dr. William D. Curtis, Westhaven, Conn.; Dr. Richards J. Eamich, 2510 Q street northwest; Dr. Leigh C. Fairbank, 1131 Munitions Building; Dr. Samuel Feldman, 4411 Eighteenth street northwest; Dr. Albert S. Goldblatt, 315 Taylor street northwest; Dr. Edmund M. Henderson, Falls Church, Va., and Dr. Sheldon Sutin, 3518 Tenth street northwest.

Ten out of 11 completed the hygienist's examination: Helen Briggs, 1311 Spring road northwest; A. E. Forzano, Franklin, Ohio; Betty Jane Keefe, Ithaca, N. Y.; Bernadette Lange, 214 East Capitol street; Ferna Kendall, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Marian Agnes Tomlinson, Altoona, Pa.; Reba E. Turley, Leesburg, Va.; Miriam E. McCottry, 606 Thirteenth street northeast; Johnnie M. Childness, 1421 Twelfth street northwest, and Anna Mae Davis, Elizabeth, N. J.

Dr. Martin A. Stohlman, of 3973 Harrison street northwest, was elected president of the board to succeed Dr. Charles T. Bassett, 1726 I street northwest. Dr. Colvin was to continue in office as secretary and treasurer for another term. Other members of the board are Dr. Vernon J. Lohr, 1029 Vermont avenue northwest, and Dr. Harold Hertford, 1726 I street northwest.

Hail And Farewell.

The rapidity with which Washington changed its mind about the Boy Scouts has been an interesting phenomenon. Two weeks ago it was smart to scoff about the coming horde of "Sprouts;" testier tongues talked sourly of the confusion and litter they would bring and particularly of their tents and latrines which were cluttering up both shores of the Potomac.

Today there is nothing but praise for the Scouts as they wind up their Jamboree. Motorists will genuinely miss the opportunity of picking up a carload of the boys and driving them from the city to their camps. Their manners and enthusiasms have been equally attractive. Many more will regret that the pageants and exhibitions have ended in the arena at the foot of the Monument. The entertainment, loaded with unconscious bits of humor, was a welcome open-air variant for a city tired of machine-cooled and machine-produced moving-picture shows.

More than the refreshment brought by these boys, however, accounted for their welcome here. In the first place, they gave needed reassurance that the various highly regimented European youth movements are not the only means of promoting national strength and security. And the army of 27,000 Scouts offered an accurate view of the America of tomorrow. Every section of the country was represented among them. Without exception, they appeared to be clear-eyed, hard-muscled and thoroughly self-reliant future citizens.

Clean-cut is the word for them. Of course, they will lose some of this as the price they pay for maturity, but they cannot lose it all. And even if only a part remains, still it bodes well for the future of the Nation. There need be little fear that the New World's blood is running thin with men of their cut in prospect. They showed a capability, a responsibility and an integrity which would have hushed up many cocktail-hour Jeremiahs if they had taken the trouble to inspect the Jamboree.

That fortunate part of the city which did get to know the Scouts found an inspiration in them that will not soon fade.

The Marriage Clause Repeal.

By a substantial majority the House has voted for outright repeal of the so-called marriage clause of the economy act of 1932. The measure now goes to the Senate, which is expected to sustain the action. In that event, we shall be able to write "finis" to an experiment from which a good many instructive lessons can be drawn.

In 1932 the country was in the depths of depression and jobs in private employment were virtually unobtainable. Congress tried, therefore, to minimize the hardships of retrenchment by means of the marriage clause. When dismissals become necessary, it provides that the first ones to be dropped shall be married persons whose husbands or wives, as the case may be, hold positions in the Government service.

This marriage clause, inserted with the best intentions in response to an emergency, seemed justified at the time. However, it has given rise to some unexpected evils, which have caused demands for its repeal to become increasingly insistent as the country emerged from the depression.

By some critics it is denounced as an insidious plot to discriminate against married women. Others regard the clause as an antisocial measure which has prevented marriage, led to concealment of marriage and destroyed the marital happiness of young people struggling to maintain a home. Although charges of this sort are largely a matter of hearsay, there is a widespread belief that the mere existence of the marriage clause has created some difficult social and economic problems.

This belief strengthens conviction that in normal times the Government should maintain a severely impersonal relationship toward its employes. When the act of marriage prevents an efficient person, man or woman, from entering the service, or leads to the dismissal of a more competent employe rather than a less efficient one, a severe blow is dealt to the merit principle of appointment. Furthermore, the Government, whether intentionally or not, interferes with the private lives of those in its employ when it threatens them with the marriage clause.

This is a kind of paternalism that is resented by a free people trained to believe that the state is their servant, not their master. It is particularly repugnant to Americans, with their individualistic leanings and their impatience of official restraints upon freedom of action.

A House Divided.

Factional disputes involving organized maritime workers have plagued the shipping industry for a long time. To these complications have now been added a C. I. O. drive to bring all classes of maritime labor on shore and at sea under the Lewis banner and a refusal of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific to join the movement.

Apparently Mr. Lewis' purpose is to bring together all opposed to A. F. of L. leadership with the object of crushing their rivals. Whatever may be the reaction of other maritime unions to this plea, it is apparent that shipping companies face the prospect of prolongation and intensification of the internecine struggles now hampering the industry so seriously.

When the C. I. O. definitely disassociated itself from the parent A. F. of L. organization it was predicted that jurisdictional conflicts would seriously weaken the labor movement. At first, these forebodings appeared to be exaggerated, largely because the C. I. O. invaded territory where the A. F. of L. had little influence. As the drive is extended to other fields, however, it becomes increasingly evident that the two rival groups are engaged in a struggle for supremacy which subjects bewildered and helpless employers to the pull of conflicting interests.

Mr. Green's taunting remarks on the steel strike emphasize the bitterness of this rivalry. Organizers try to gain as many adherents as possible for their group and to secure recognition as representative bargaining agencies ahead of their rivals. Agreements obtained under such conditions are more likely to be a prelude to industrial strife than a formula for maintaining peace.

If jurisdictional disputes like those which led to the general trucking strike in Philadelphia should spread rapidly, the trade union movement would receive a severe setback. Under such conditions public support for the principles of collective bargaining would be alienated by the spectacle of unionist arrayed against unionist, heedless of the effect upon the welfare of the community. An intransigeant employer who refuses to deal with a really representative bargaining agency is no more dangerous as an enemy of labor than the trade union leaders who make it impossible for employers to find a responsible group with which to deal.

With organized labor divided against itself, moreover, the problem of determining which group or faction is truly representative is extraordinarily difficult. It is easy to say that the decision should be left to the workers themselves. They are supposed to know whether the A. F. of L. or the C. I. O. provides the type of union best suited to their needs. But in practice the decision is often pre-determined by the strategy of those in control of the unions.

If rival forces are fairly well matched, the chances are that both sides will try to avoid a test of strength. Moreover, if public opinion forces them to ask for an election to decide which group is representative, there is no assurance that the defeated side will accept the decision. The strife-torn shipping industry, for example, will not be pacified by calling for elections to be held under the auspices of the National Labor Relations Board. Stronger measures are required to deal with the deep-seated conflicts which Mr. Lewis seems disposed to aggravate.

Success in collective bargaining is impossible unless the employer is able to deal with an accredited agency acknowledging an obligation to abide by the terms of a contract. Jurisdictional disputes put the friendly and co-operative employer in the same boat with the enemy of organized labor, and give the latter an adequate excuse for his hostility. If the labor movement is to go forward it must demonstrate the value of organization from the viewpoint of the public as well as the working man. The surest way to alienate sympathy and strengthen a reactionary opposition is to permit jurisdictional disputes to divide labor's forces.

Playing With Fire.

Already embroiled with Soviet Russia because of a seemingly endless series of frontier disputes, the Japanese army on the mainland of Asia this week got itself tangled up as well with Chinese forces garrisoned in the Peiping area.

There seems to be no direct relationship between the Amur incident and the fighting that occurred several days ago between Japanese and Chinese troops in the vicinity of China's former capital. Nevertheless, a link does exist between these events. They are the inevitable outgrowth of the restless policies which the Japanese army of occupation has been pursuing for some years and which subsided only temporarily while the army and its program were under sharp attack from the civilians back home.

The diplomatic settlement of the Amur incident, reached at Moscow some days ago, has eased the potentially dangerous situation along the Soviet-Manchukuo border only temporarily. Yesterday Foreign Commissar Litvinoff found it necessary to issue a stern warning to the Japanese that any invasion of Soviet territory will meet with forcible resistance by Russia.

While the Sino-Japanese clash in the Peiping zone has had no disturbing aftermath—both the Chinese and Japanese troops are reported to have evacuated the scene of the fighting—the basic situation there remains similarly troublesome. And it will remain so as long as the Kwantung army continues to indulge in the same activities in North China in the future as it has done during the past few years.

Whether it was a Japanese or a Chinese soldier who fired the first shot is not clear. The point is really of little importance. The Japanese forces on this, as on so many other occasions, were clearly inviting trouble by engaging in night maneuvers in areas garrisoned by Chinese troops.

These activities have made the Chinese jittery. There is no telling when the maneuvers may be turned into actual operations designed to extend the sphere of Japanese control in North China a bit further. Already, in the period since the conquest of Manchuria, the Kwantung army has extended the zone of its effective military control to practically all the major strategic points in that area.

The surprising thing, therefore, is not that this Japanese penchant for staging sham battles anywhere and everywhere in the Peiping-Tientsin area had led to a clash, but that such clashes have not been of frequent occurrence. Playing with fire is always a dangerous game. It is particularly so in the vicinity of a powder barrel.

Our Financial Crisis.

There is ample reason for local residents to complain over the nature of the District tax bill and for the Commissioners to protest against the intolerable delay it has encountered in the Senate. The District is rapidly approaching a financial crisis. Yet Senate leaders are so eager to drive through the court-packing bill before its fallacies are fully exposed that they refuse even to consider the District's plight.

It is true, of course, that the local tax bill is a controversial measure. Failure of the District Committee to work out an equitable tax plan leaves a heavy responsibility upon the Senate. The drastic land tax approved by the committee would bring a jump from $7,200,000 to $12,000,000, or 67 per cent, in the revenue from land in the District. Such an increase in the burden on homeowners would be an outrage. But the bungling of the District Committee does not make the city's financial dilemma the less acute.

In the Jacobs report Congress was advised "to develop as promptly as possible some of the alternative forms of revenue which have proved effective for lessening the burden of property taxation and bringing about a wider and more equitable distribution of the incidence of taxation." The committee found that the percentage of revenue collected from real estate is considerably higher here than in other cities. These conclusions, of course, merely confirmed what students of the local tax problem have pointed out for a number of years.

Yet the House and the Senate District Committee have both voted sharp increases in the effective rate on real estate here. To raise the needed revenue these taxes must necessarily be drastic, for they will apply to only 45 per cent of the land in this "city of tax-dodgers." Congress is largely responsible for the extensive withdrawal of land from the tax rolls, yet that body is not willing to face the issue of shifting the tax burden where it can be more equitably borne. Its action is an open admission of failure to solve the local tax problem.

While this muddle awaits a solution, the District's financial crisis grows more serious every day. Local taxes are due in September, but bills cannot be sent out because officials do not know what the tax rate will be. If Congress fails to pass a tax bill, the Commissioners will be forced by law to boost the real estate levy to make up the entire deficit of approximately $7,000,000.

That contingency as well as the threat of a drastic land tax is certain to have a detrimental effect on real estate development in Washington. Exorbitant levies on homeowners here would undoubtedly stimulate growth of Maryland and Virginia suburbs at the expense of the District. And higher local rents could be expected to encourage the exodus.

Even more serious is the problem of meeting the city's routine expenses. With the collection of taxes delayed and only meager funds now available, the District will probably have to borrow to meet its pay roll. But at present it has no authority to borrow. A provision authorizing temporary advances from the Treasury has been written into the tax bill, but prospects for early action on that measure seem to become more gloomy every day.

Apparently the President will have to take a hand in the situation to save the District from temporary bankruptcy. Certainly a word from him would help to straighten out the muddle over new taxes and to hasten the bill through the Senate.

The Japanese Army.

Willard Price in The Spectator, London.

The Japanese army is the will of the nation. While deeply sympathetic with the people, the military appear to believe as Hegel did that "the people is that portion of the state that does not know what it wills." Benignly and boldly the army thinks for the people. Is it best for the people to have Manchuria? The army decides.

The army and navy are responsible to no parliament or cabinet. They are answerable to the throne alone. They are in a peculiar sense the people's high priests to the god-emperor.

"The cherry is the best of flowers, the soldier the best of men." So runs the Japanese proverb, and so also runs the conviction of the average citizen. The Chinese consider their best too good to put into the army; the Japanese consider that no one can fully measure up to this sacred trust.

The Liberal Defined.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Richard L. Feldman, of East Falls Church, asks the question: "What is a liberal?" He then attempts to answer his own question in a manner that shows he is terribly mentally confused. He emits an unscientific barrage of mustard gas when he says: "Class war, confiscation of property, villification of the courts, nullification of the Constitution, degradation by rum and relief and enslavement in debt—both public and private—these are some of the fruits of liberalism."

That certainly is some comprehensive indictment, if I know my Blackstone! But he omits a few minor items like small-pox, measles, tornadoes, earthquakes, the protective tariff and the decline of the Roman empire. However, he does mention something about Nero fiddling and Rome burning.

From what dictionary does Richard Feldman get this definition: "A liberal is an ignoramus gone haywire?" Does Feldman want us to take him seriously or is he merely ranting or "sounding off?" My Winston dictionary gives six different definitions of "liberal" but none a la Feldman. E. g. "Unprejudiced; free from narrowness in ideas," "disposed to a democratic rather than aristocratic or conservative form of government; progressive." I object strenuously to twisting connotations or definitions of words.

The liberal is one who believes in fair play. He is a progressive, as the dictionary and common usage define it. He stands between two fires. Like Ishmael of old, every man's hand is against him. He stands between the reactionaries and conservatives on one side and the impetuous radicals on the other. The liberal wants to go ahead slowly but surely.

The liberal is one who stands half way between the old order and the new. He is a transitor. He is assisting in the transition from an antiquated type of civilization to one that will better serve the needs of the masses. He has an open mind. He defends free speech and the radical's right to advocate a change in our existing economic and social system. The role of liberal is the most difficult of any.

Mr. Fish's Charges.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Newspapers all over the country have made much ado about Congressman Fish's charge that President Roosevelt is himself a tax avoider. Fish's challenge that the President's tax return be bared to the country meets with no action on the part of the President, who after all is the lad that should step forward and show the country, by exhibiting the return, that Congressman Fish is playing politics and is "all wet."

But the President does nothing—characteristic of his attitude in connection with the strike disorders all over the country. What is the reason?

Fish has created an impression in the public's mind that the President has something to hide, and the President evidently prefers to let this impression remain, rather than permit his tax return to be exhibited. It doesn't sound so good to those standing on the sidelines!

Von Rosen Genealogy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your stories of the marriage of Prince Charles of Sweden to Countess Elsa von Rosen you have persistently garbled the name of the countess' first husband. On May 11, in the announcement of her betrothal to the prince, you stated she was the divorced wife of "M. Agols von Rosen." On July 7, in the story of her wedding you rendered it "M. Aglos Von Rosen," while in an earlier edition you had it "Oglos." Sounds Greek to me!

As a matter of fact, his name is properly Count Adolf von Rosen. His former wife is a Von Rosen by birth as well as marriage, her father being the court master of ceremonies, Count Eugene Erik A. A. von Rosen. It may be of interest to know that the new princess is of American descent. Her grandmother (the wife of Captain-Commander Count Carl Gustaf von Rosen, of the Swedish Royal Navy) having been Ella Carlton Moore, daughter of the late Bloomfield Haines Moore, one of Philadelphia's most distinguished citizens. He was a descendant of noted New Jersey families (one of his ancestors having been the Hon. Samuel French, a member of the State legislature toward the close of the eighteenth century), by his wife, Clara Sophia Jessup, of celebrated New England houses. She was a descendant of Gen. Augustus Collins (Revolutionary veteran) and Gov. William Leete, of Connecticut (seventeenth century), and a kinswoman of Gen. Oliver Wolcott, Governor of Connecticut, and a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Thus, by her recent marriage, the former Countess von Rosen links the Swedish royal house with some of the names famous in American annals. MILTON RUBICAM.

On Packing The Supreme Court

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why should the Supreme Court fight come up again? Our forefathers were farsighted men, writing a Constitution for a people to be governed by, and to be proud of to the end of American days.

When a man reaches the age of 50 years, he is supposed to enjoy "wisdom" and regardless of his political belief—a man on the Supreme Court bench weighs every issue before him according to genuine law and the Constitution. We, the people, may not understand the decisions—but our faith in those men past the age of 50 years gives us confidence that it is made for the good of all.

May there be no compromise on the Supreme Court issue—no chance for packing and no compulsory retirement of all justices past the age of 75 years. Why should a Representative in Congress be so weak mentally as to be influenced by a pat on the back—or even a threat? An honest voter hates a weakling.

VOTER FOR 30 YEARS.
Onancock, Va., July 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To pack or not to pack? Most of us would prefer not to pack if the plans which have been promulgated for the health and welfare of our people could be carried out sans interference. But the adverse decisions rendered by the Supreme Court which have set the country back ten years in health and sanitation can not be ignored. We must not fall down on the job now, and if packing is the quickest and surest way, then, let's pack.

Reporters and radio commentators who predict such dire consequences in the event of packing and who "run a temperature" over any change from the old order, should take a vacation on the high seas, in a small yacht, or launch, or sailboat—battle with the wind and waves, watch the fish in their struggle for survival, do a little constructive thinking and they may come to realize that the "world do move" irrespective of attempts to hold it back.

Many old men are liberal—a few young men, reactionary, as indicated by votes in House and Senate. The astute business man employs assistants who work with him—not for him—to bring about the fruition of his plans. The President needs just such co-workers in Congress.

So, come on, boys, pack—it's almost time to go home. REKCAP.

From A Moderate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a member of several labor unions—industrial, railroad, building—during 30 years, I'd seem to lack gratitude or be in the pay of some slimy royalist by failure to swallow all Godfrey Monroe says in his case of: "Organized labor and working man versus unprincipled brigands of big business."

As a fledgling holder of a union card, knowledge zero, aplomb and garrulity monumental, plus a sudden feeling of great wrongs, I had aspirations to be a hot shot in union circles and "put up a fight." All outside were "rats," benefitting by our fight, butts of persecution. Other views than my own didn't exist—except for purposes of hot derision and villification.

Compared with what modern labor has attained—and will hold and add to without effort—we had reason for squawks. Mr. Ford had not yet, by his example in 1913, given labor its greatest boost; though the Knights of Labor had righted many real wrongs previously. Nor had the war, which gave labor its second greatest unaided forward impulse, yet erupted. But when wages, following the 1919-21 backsurge, went forward under demand impulse, labor leaders swarmed up to seize the credit. "Look what we got youse," Swell pap for the uninitiates.

One absurdity of labor group membership is the illusion of unholy purity that afflicts you; any resistance to your every demand is proof of exploitation, subversive influence; you're incapable of error; your aims are devoid of politics, but not the other fellow's; you merely have to rant and point out "how big he is"; concoct stories of wrongs; a few martyrs help, and never give credit.

In the eyes of the fanatic, if you have moderation in the capital-labor debate, you are one of the creatures of entrenched greed the demagogues rave themselves hoarse about.

Now, stripping corporations for current gain won't help labor in the next depression. Monomania of "ever higher wages" will not solve any problems, if the golden goose is killed, either for the working man or consumer. Who created the condition that led to the martyrs in the Chicago massacre? Girdler, says Monroe. An equally good case is possible on the other side, from the same facts. But that would include the unforgivable of modern organized methods—moderation.

But what's the use—I've already been tagged as one expecting a check tomorrow from some "Prince of Privilege"—who would probably be too busy attending to business to give a thought to what I, Mr. Monroe, his cohorts or critics, rant about. G. A. FARSON.

FHA's Function.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter published July 5 from Mr. John T. Goolrick, of Fredericksburg, Va., is another instance of misunderstanding of the national housing act which created the Federal Housing Administration.

The national housing act was passed "to encourage improvement in housing standards and conditions, and to provide a system of mutual mortgage insurance." Mr. Goolrick states that "the Federal Housing Administration is planning now a method to lend money to men with money," and asks "why cannot the Government lend money to people to build homes and let them pay like rent?"

The Federal Housing Administration lends no money because it is not empowered to do so. All funds are supplied by private lending institutions approved by the Federal Housing Administration as mortgagees. The law permits the Federal Housing Administration to insure mortgages, taken by such approved mortgagees on properties, up to 80 per cent of the appraised value, which means that the home buyer must have an equity of at least 20 per cent in the property.

I am sure that Mr. Goolrick will be glad to be set straight on these facts.

Assistant to the Administrator, Federal Housing Administration.

The Post Impressionist

Late Afternoon.

SHE was a very old lady. She looked like a caricature of age limned by a mocking artist. Her hands were talons, the flesh drawn tautly and parchment-like over the protruding knuckles. Her face was ugly. Pain and time had not been kind to her. Miss Marian was 93 years old—the oldest in the old ladies' home.

Outside the open window the afternoon sun baked the parched earth. A little warm wind fingered the curtains. Clocks ticked. There were five clocks in the room.

* * * *

"Mrs. Sabrina told me you once lived in Amherst," I said.

"Yes. I lived in Amherst for 20 years. I was a seamstress," she said.

"Mrs. Sabrina told me you knew Emily Dickinson." Mrs. Sabrina managed the old ladies' home.

"I did not know her. But I sewed for her a whole week. I used to sew for all the best people," she said.

Her eyes were partially veiled by cataracts. They were blue eyes.

She added, "Afterwards many of my customers asked about the Dickinsons. But I said I was a seamstress, not a gossip. I never gossiped."

I asked, "Did you sew at the Dickinson's just that one week?"

"Yes," she said. "But I used to sew regularly for the Dickinson's daughter-in-law, Sue. Everyone liked my work. It wasn't because of my sewing that I never went back. The Dickinson's didn't like strangers."

"Didn't like strangers?"

"No. Outsiders weren't welcome there."

I said, "Did Emily have friends?"

Miss Marian was silent for a long moment before she answered in her slow cracked voice.

"She was fond of Sue as I remember. She lived on part of the Dickinson land. She and Emily were great friends."

* * * *

I waited. Her hands stirred a bit.

"It was so very long ago. Every year it becomes more difficult to remember."

"Did you sew for Emily?" I heard the clocks ticking. There was a strange odor in the room. I repeated my question.

"Oh, yes. Yes, I sewed for Emily. White dresses. All white dresses."

"Didn't she wear anything but white?"

"I made white dresses for her. I don't think she wore any colors."

"What did she look like?" I said.

"The only time I saw her—her sister Lavinia was the same size so I fitted the dresses on her. She was handsome. Her hair was coal black."

"Emily?"

"No. Her sister."

"What did Emily look like?" The five clocks ticked in a queer broken rythym.

"The only time I saw her was the last night I was at the Dickinson's house. It must have been Saturday because I used to stay at one house a whole week. Emily, her sister and I had supper together in the hall."

"In the hall?"

"Emily did not eat at the family table, ever. Her meals were carried up to her on a tray. She seldom left her room. Something happened before I came to her house and she stopped speaking to her father. Mr. Dickinson was a good man but a dark one. I didn't like him."

I prompted, "Something happened——"

"Yes. We didn't know what it was, we in Amherst. Everyone wondered. Everyone talked. It made Emily hate her father—but perhaps I should not say that; perhaps she didn't hate her father. But everyone talked."

* * * *

The strange odor seemed to have grown stronger.

"Do you remember the supper?" I said.

Miss Marian's lips curled in a smile. "It was so long ago. We ate in the hall. Emily, her sister and I. It was very gay. Emily was like—like a bird. She scarcely touched her food. She was handsome."

"Did she talk?"

"She was—I think she was quiet. She talked to her sister and she talked to me. But she was quiet. Before her sister and I were through she asked to be excused and went upstairs. She was wearing a white dress. She told me she liked the dresses I made for her."

"Do you remember what she looked like?"

"She was handsome. Her hair was warm-looking. It was not red. It was warm, warm-looking."

Outside the open window crickets were chirping. The ticks of the clocks were louder. Instead of asking more questions, I told Miss Marian of the book Emily Dickinson's niece had written about Emily.

"That would be Sue's little girl. She married a foreigner." Miss Marian leaned forward. "Sue's children were so pretty. I remember them."

Somewhere a bell rang. It was the supper bell, Miss Marian said. She asked me to come back. "I'll try to remember some more," she said.

Something made me hurry. I wanted to get away from those clocks and that smell. I ran down the driveway. I ran all the way home. I felt I must hurry. The time of being young is too short.—

Writes of Hitch-Hiking Tour

Into Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 8.—Possibly my resistance had been lowered by my fine mosquito and chigger bites, or, possibly, I was simply too hungry. In any event, when I got to St. Charles, Mo., bound for Kansas City, and had walked no less than 8 miles before breakfast, I was about ready to call the whole thing quits for a day or two.

TOM McCARTHY.

John Cowper Powys, the English novelist, used to sing the delights of a walk before breakfast. It was essential, he held, that the walk be accomplished before eating. After my hike into St. Charles, I amended Mr Powys' advice, to the extent that the walk shouldn't be too long, and the breakfast should be a guaranteed item.

When I stumbled from my field outside of St. Louis, I nearly stepped on two fellow wayfarers stretched out alongside the road and still sleeping.

Few farm houses along the road showed any signs of life at that hour of the morning, and no roadside stands were open where I might apply for the privilege of working for my breakfast. The sun came up hot, and the motorists remained cool to my pleas for a ride.

• • • •

THE ONE restaurant, I found open in St. Charles, was run by two self-sufficient appearing young women. The restaurant was small and about half-filled. The customers turned to look at me, as I entered with my knapsack. I sat down at a table, and when the waitress came over, I showed her the camera.

That camera hadn't taken a successful picture since I left Washington. It probably got too badly banged up during my ride atop the beer truck. In any event, I planned to sell it at the first opportunity. Maybe this was my chance.

"I would like some breakfast," I told the waitress. I haven't any money, but I would like to sell this camera—far below its real worth, although it does need a little repairing. If you don't want to buy a camera, maybe you'll hold it as security to cover the cost of ham and eggs, while I dig up a buyer."

"Just a minute," the girl said, looking at me rather coldly.

She went into the kitchen and then came out and busied herself with the other customers. I could overhear a man, dressed in a work shirt and trousers, whispering to his wife at the next table. Their little boy gave their conversation away, by piping "What's the matter ma, is the man starving?"

I cleared my throat and took a drink of water. I was scarcely looking my best.

After a while, the girl didn't come into the room to wait on the customers, and she didn't come in to tell me I could have breakfast. Through the doorway, I could see her lounging in the kitchen. She wasn't going to bother with me. I couldn't pledge a $30 camera for a 30-cent breakfast. I put my camera back in my knapsack and made for the door, while some of the customers stopped eating to watch me. I hadn't gone half a dozen steps down the street when the door of the restaurant slammed again behind me.

"Hey, buddy." It was the man in the work shirt who had been eating with his wife and child. "Take this along," he said, handing me a half a dollar. "I know how it is," he said.

• • • •

THAT GESTURE just shocked the morning into a thing of singing brightness. I've never felt better, anytime, than when that workman handed me a half-a-dollar and said, "I know how it is."

I thanked him awkwardly. I gave him back the money. He threw it back to me. I had to hand it to him again, before he would take it.

It seems that where you'll find one cold gesture, you'll also find one warm and friendly, when you're looking at America from the bottom of the heap.

The man in the hotel took the camera as pledge for breakfast.

• • • •

IT WAS a blistering hot day, and the route from St. Louis to Kansas City was thronged with hitch-hikers.

I asked some of them where they were going. A boy from New York was on his way to visit his grandparents. A middle-aged workman was on his way to get a job in a hospital laundry in Colorado. A few were heading, as I was, for the harvest in Kansas.

Along certain 10-mile sections of open country you could count a hitch-hiker every half mile.

One truck driver, with a sense of humor, wanted to see how many of them he could pick up. When I passed him, he had loaded the back of his truck with 15 or 20 hikers of all ages.

• • • •

I RODE into Kansas City with a man from Kentucky. He was driving a light truck and traveling West. I sat in the back of the truck and sometimes thrust my head around the driver's cab to see the course of the road. I soon stopped that. My friend from Kentucky chewed tobacco.

I got a chance to talk with him at little stop-overs. He seemed to be rather uncertain, and there was something of a beaten look about him. He looked a little scared. His wife's face was set in a hard, sorrowing mask. The closest they had to baggage was a big cardboard box and several smaller boxes.

"I'm going a long way," he told me as we stopped in Kansas City. "You're welcome to ride along with us. We like a little company," he said.

"I think I want to stop over here," I told him, "but how far are you going?"

"We're going to Denver, and then we might go on to Salt Lake City."

"Well, that is a long trip," I said. "You ought to have a good time."

"It won't be so much fun," he said. "You see we lost all we had in the flood last spring. Our home—everything we had. I'm a jack-of-all-trades and don't belong to any union. I can't get a job back in Boyd County because the union's got all the jobs tied up. You see, I never was a one-trade man. We're going out to Denver. We've got relatives there. Maybe we can start over again. Maybe we'll have to go on further. We're going to give it a try, anyway."

He was a middle-aged man, with a quiet, friendly—though shy—manner. I hope he makes out all right.

TOMORROW: McCarthy makes a few observations on things he finds in Kansas City, "the Heart of America."

Maine Sees The Joke.

Yankees down East know the art of meeting a joke with a jest. After the November election there was much joking about Maine and Vermont, the only States to go Republican. They were represented as outside the borders of the United States. Now a camp owner in the Rangeley Lakes region has put the joke to publicity use. They are adept in Maine in making even a joke serve the purpose when it comes to advertising the State as the playground of the Nation.

In this instance, the camp owner has provided something that is probably unique in the way of advertising folders. His is in the form of a passport, authorizing the holder to travel to the camp, and is labeled as valid during July, August and September. There is space for amendments and extensions, and a visa good for all the privileges and pleasures of the camp.

At the same time, another passport jest originates out of the State. The writer of a letter addressed to the State of Maine Publicity Bureau announces: "I've got my passport into Maine this summer and so am all set." Nobody as yet has suggested a treaty with the United States giving Maine most-favored nation status, but that merry jest may yet be forthcoming as advertising material.

End Of Patience

Observer Reports Signs That Germans Are At Last Stirring Against Nazi Diet Of Regimentation And Privation.

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THIS SIDE OF the Orient there is no great people which is so patient as the Germans; no great people which will so long bear privations without revolting. After spending the first two war years in Germany and the next two in Sweden, Russia and Denmark, I returned to America for a vacation in 1919, and did not know whether merely to smile or to indulge in sharp language when I heard Americans complaining about their privations. They never knew even remotely what war is like. Germans of the war days would have regarded their fare as directly luxurious.

This patience, together with long training in obedience to authority, explains why the Germans have not yet risen against the Nazi regime. And there is, of course, the secret political police with its concentration camps and medieval torture systems; the continuing mass prosecutions of political suspects, with long prison sentences or decapitations; a muzzled press, which keeps the Germans from knowing what is happening. This is a combination which could well keep a less patient people in subjection for a time—a combination which forbids one to hope for its speedy liberation and return to the twentieth century.

But the general situation in Adolf Hitler's Third Reich is speedily going from bad to worse—and this despite occasional reports to the contrary by trusting tourists who see only what the government wants them to see. The system of dressing the windows for show, invented by Potemkin a century and a half ago to deceive Catherine the Great of Russia, has been brought to an apex of artistry by the Nazis. And when tourists return with their tales of general happiness and prosperity in Germany they are simply telling things that are not so. The latest of these trusting outpourings came from an American who was told by Hitler that there would be no war in Europe—and who believed it because Hitler told him so.

Import Surplus Shown By Warehouse Holdings.

A FORTNIGHT or so ago I reported for this column that Germany had an export balance for May of 8,500,000 marks, and that this was regarded as better than it appeared because of the number of Sundays and holidays in that month. But as I learn now, it was not only worse than it appeared on the surface, but there was actually no export balance at all, nor was there an export balance in April, despite official figures claiming it to have been 15,000,000 marks.

At the end of April there lay in bonded warehouses 217,500 metric tons of wheat and wheat flour, 47,800 tons of rye and 162,000 tons of maize, which had not passed customs and hence did not appear in the import statistics. The total value of these imports was around 45,000,000 marks. Thus an alleged export surplus of 23.5 million marks for the two months because an import surplus of about 21.5 millions.

For months the government has been urging the Germans to eat more vegetables and less meat and fats. "The Germans are too fat anyhow," said one ukase in effect, "and it would benefit their health to cut down on fat foods." How far the shortage has gone is indicated by the following from the Frankfort Gazette of June 20:

In co-operation with the efforts of the People's Health Bureau, which has long been recommending a greater consumption of vegetables and potatoes in the place of a too high consumption of meats and fats, the Reich Labor Service has rearranged its bill of fare with good results. It is reported further that the army is now carrying on experiments along the same line. Here, too, the results to date have been good.

The German army has always been the government's favorite child. When its supply of meat is reduced and it is expected to get along largely on potatoes, cabbages and turnips, there could hardly be any happening of more significance to one who knows militaristic Germany.

In my last article I reported Dr. Hjalmar Schacht as saying to an English banker who had wondered at the secrecy surrounding the German finances, that "it is forbidden to distrust the government." Number 18 of "Die Deutsche Volkswirtschaft," a National Socialist economic organ, deals with the development of the German national debt. It reports first that long-term obligations have reached a total of 5.78 billion marks. But it either cannot or may not go further. It writes: "The exact amount of the short-term obligations, which are also current, is, of course, not known." One notes the "of course."

Plainly put, neither the total indebtedness of the Reich nor the rate at which this indebtedness is increasing may be made known.

MONTH after month brings new indications of a growing revolt against Nazi rule. Their orators speak ever oftener of "the internal enemy who is again raising his head." Alfred Rosenberg, party "philosopher," speaking recently in Karlsruhe, expressed indignation at the fact "that there are still in Germany groups which do not desire to adjust themselves to the spirit of the times." Police General Daluege complains of "the circles that only outwardly conceal their sympathies with Bolshevism."

"Party Comrade" Max Gronauer, official Nazi orator for Pomerania, which was formerly a Nazi stronghold, reports to Dr. Goebbels in sad tone about his experiences.

"One comes into a village of, for example, 800 inhabitants," he wails, "and finds only some 60 or 80 persons in the hall. And among these are a couple dozen Hitler Youth, etc. But the hall would hold 300 to 400 persons. The 80 present sit shamedly along the walls, one or two in a place. In front of the speaker are only empty chairs and empty walls. . . .

"He does his best to save what can be saved, but the contact, the psychic union between speaker and hearers, is lacking. . . . The few present then sing the Deutschland song and the Horst Wessel song with all kinds of false tones, and the meeting's bankruptcy reaches its high point."

Dr. Robert Ley, head of the German Labor Front, is also not happy. The German people, he says, "should rejoice over the wonder of the rebirth of our folk through Adolf Hitler. Why do you not jubilate to Heaven?" he asked an audience of workers. The answer is not recorded.

The Nazi leaders of the Coblenz-Trier district reported last April their experiences in trying to secure contributions from the peasants for winter work. Their reports were all in a similar vein: The peasants "lacked the spirit of sacrifice;" "one had the impression of an organized opposition;" "they would rather give money to their pastors than to us." These are samples of recurring complaints. Significant also is the failure of a move to secure contributions in all western Germany for a new Zeppelin. One mark was retained from the wages of the miners in one Ruhr section.

Radio Disturbing Nazi Party Leaders.

THE NAZI dignitaries are growing more and more jittery about the radio. Sales of apparatus with short-wave reception were prohibited in Bremen a month and more ago, and radios in dwellings are being inspected. Equipment for ultra-short waves is being removed from all sets, and special permission is required for ordinary short-wave receivers.

Hitler spoke to workers in the shipyards of Blohm & Voss in Hamburg and five days later to workers in the Mannesmann works in Dusseldorf in May. In both places many former Socialists and Communists were arrested the day before the speech, and released after it was over.

Mass arrests continue, in lots of 200 and more. In Dresden 40 S. A. and 20 S. S. men were arrested in one factory in May because of wage demands. In the summer of 1935, 152 Socialists from Hamburg were sent to prison for terms up to two and a half years. The sentences are now expiring, but as fast as they do, the prisoners, instead of being set free, are being interned in the concentration camp at Papenburg. This camp and the concentration camp at Fuhlsbuettel are overfilled because of arrests of suspects by the Hamburg secret political police.

I do not attempt here to analyze the situation more closely as to future possibilities; that can come later. But here is a significant happening! When Johny Detmer and three other anti-Fascists were beheaded last spring in Altona, the execution was not carried out by the regular headsman of Magdeburg, but by a master butcher of Altona, an S. S. man named Fock. He had hoped that the fee of 2,000 marks would help put his shop on its feet. It became known in Altona that he was the headsman, customers stayed away, bankruptcy menaced, and Fock shot his wife and committed suicide.

France Balks

By

Barnet Nover

The Shoe On The Other Foot.

DURING the past week two significant developments have taken place regarding the Spanish situation.

One is the apparently successful offensive being conducted by the loyalist forces west of Madrid. If continued this should prove of considerable importance, although the point must be kept in mind that on previous occasions when the loyalists have carried the war into enemy territory such efforts have invariably petered out.

One more immediate significance is the other development, namely, the stiffening of the French attitude vis-a-vis the Fascist powers.

Practically for the first time since the Moroccan flare-up of some months ago, the Paris government is taking the bit into its teeth and refusing to either be bullied by the Fascist powers or be led by the nose by Great Britain.

Though still determined to co-operate with London regarding the Spanish crisis and for that reason willing to see the international sea patrol restored on the basis that obtained before the Leipzig incident and Germany's and Italy's withdrawal, France has now declared that it will open the Spanish border unless the nonintervention equilibrium is restored. At the same time the Paris government has let it be known that it will not now recognize the belligerency of Gen. Franco.

• • • •

THERE ARE reasons to believe that France is not bluffing. Nor, in the midst of an extremely serious financial crisis, can it afford to bluff.

Neither now any more than at any time since the Spanish civil war began is it anxious to plunge Europe into a dangerous international crisis, and possibly war. If anything, France's internal situation makes a lessening of external tension peremptory if the French program of financial rehabilitation is to succeed. But if the Fascist powers have been banking on French difficulties to gain an advantage they have made a profound error in calculations.

The fact of the matter is that, pardoxically, it is the existence of a financial crisis which has compelled France to stiffen its attitude regarding Spain.

When Blum was premier he was in a unique position of being able to work out a Spanish policy without reference to the French internal situation.

He knew full well that one element in the Popular Front, namely, the Communists, had no alternative but to stick by him regardless of how much they might dislike the nonintervention program. The socialists, too, tasting power for the first time, were willing, if reluctantly, to follow their leader. There were left only the Radical Socialists and far from being in favor of a pro-Valencia policy they opposed it because of the international complications such a program would create.

• • • •

THE SITUATION is now quite different. Not Blum the Socialist, but Chautemps, the Radical Socialist, is premier, while Bonnet has taken Auriol's place at the finance ministry. And Bonnet's program, which calls for a large increase in governmental revenue to be provided in a large measure by means of indirect taxation, is viewed with little enthusiasm by the Socialists and Communists.

It is now the left of the Popular Front which must be won over and they can only be won over if, as an offset to the financial program, France's foreign policy falls in, to a larger extent than hitherto, with their views.

It is impossible, therefore, for the Chautemps regime to recognize the Spanish insurgents or permit the present farce of so-called nonintervention to continue indefinitely without destroying the coalition upon which it depends for support. It can do no other than to refuse recognition to Franco, regardless of whether Great Britain might be willing to sponsor such a step in return for the consent of Germany and Italy to return to the international sea patrol. And, also, it cannot weakly permit a system to continue whereby France maintains a rigorous control over the Franco-Spanish border while the patrol of the Portuguese-Spanish border and of the Spanish coasts are made inoperative because of the obstructionist tactics of the Fascist powers.

• • • •

SHOULD FRANCE open the Spanish border, the advantage to the Valencia regime would be considerable. Coupled with what may prove the development of a real offensive capacity by the loyalist armies, it might even prove decisive.

This is probably clearly understood both in Italy and Germany. As a result of the fall of Bilbao, the Russian crisis and France's financial difficulties, they saw themselves in a very advantageous position to press their advantage in Spain.

Their first attempt was to secure Franco-British support for a naval demonstration against Valencia. Such a demonstration would have seriously weakened loyalist morale. But the ruse of the Leipzig "incident" was shattered on the rock of British and French unwillingness. The democratic powers refused to make themselves a party to such a demonstration on the flimsy basis of a German say-so—that its warship had been the subject of a mysterious attack.

The Fascist powers then took the next step. They withdrew from the naval patrol. They were certain that this would certainly intimidate the democratic powers into making real concessions to them and to their puppet, Franco. Again they failed. Now, because of the stiffening of the French attitude, the shoe is now on the other foot. It is their turn to make concessions. The Fascist game of blackmail has apparently been played once too often.

A Quaker Poet

By William Lyon Phelps

Whittier.

Of all the great New England writers of the past century, Emerson, Hawthorne, Thoreau, Longfellow, Bryant, Lowell, Holmes, Whittier, the Quaker poet is the only one whose earthly pilgrimage of 85 years was confined to a small strip of land bounded by Maine, the Atlantic Coast, Washington and Harrisburg.

• • • •

Yet in his early years Whittier longed to travel; and in the letter proposing marriage that he wrote to Cornelia Russ, of Hartford, he mentioned his plan to travel in the "Far West." Now in an interesting pamphlet by Prof. Charles Arthur Hawley, of Iowa City, called "Corespondence Between John Geenleaf Whittier and Iowa." are printed several hitherto unpublished letters from the poet. Dr. Hawley says the first Quaker settlement west of the Mississippi River, was founded in Henry County, Iowa, in 1835. Soon after the Civil War, the Quakers decided to have a college at Salem, Iowa, and in April, 1868, they decided to name it Whittier College.

A young graduate of the college, Lorenzo Lewelling, who had taken up teaching in the Reform School, dissatisfied with his work and eaten with ambition, wrote to the poet and received the following letter:

"Amesbury
25. 2nd mo 1870.

Dear fd.

Thine has been recd. It furnishes another proof that we all have our trials, disappointments, & baffled aims. Nor is it any relief to feel that we ourselves directly or otherwise, are responsible for it. There is no man living who does not, in some way or other, need pity & sympathy.

As regards poetry, let me here say that to make it the end & aim of life seems to me an unprofitable endeavor. I do not undervalue a liter (sic) literary reputation; but it alone can do little towards making any one happy. A literary life has great temptations. I think the work thou art engaged in is higher & nobler than that of a popular writer. It is like that of the Divine Master—doing good. It is a position where a true & good man can accomplish much, for himself and for those entrusted to his care.

With kind wishes—I am very truly thy fd
JOHN G. WHITTIER."

• • • •

The next year Lewelling was editing the Salem Register, and an editorial by him contains the following statement by Whittier:

"J. G. Whittier expresses himself perfectly willing that woman should have the right of suffrage, but thinks it 'will not prove a remedy for all the ills of which she complains.'"

China to Trade Silver for U. S. Supply of Gold

Dr. Kung and Morgenthau Announce Agreement for Stability.

Following is joint statement issued by the Secretary of the Treasury and Minister of Finance Kung of China:

The monetary co-operation which resulted from the conference of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States of American with representatives of the Chinese Ministry of Finance in May, 1936, has contributed to the very successful functioning of the new Chinese monetary system with benefits both to the internal economy of China and to American trade.

We are now able to announce further progress in monetary co-operation between the two countries in pursuit of the understanding reached a year ago. At that time the Secretary of the Treasury, in a public statement, said:

"I feel confident that the monetary program being pursued by the National Government of China is not only along sound lines, but constitutes an important step toward the desired goal of stability of world currencies.

"To supplement their efforts toward that objective and to co-operate with them in their program of monetary reform and currency stabilization, and in accordance with our silver purchase policy, we have definitely indicated our willingness, under conditions mutually acceptable, to make purchases from the Central Bank of China of substantial amounts of silver, and also to make available to the Central Bank of China, under conditions which safeguard the interests of both countries, dollar exchange for currency stabilization purposes."

At the same time, the Minister of Finance of China in a public statement expressed the firm belief that the new measures of monetary reform which were then being adopted by the Chinese Government, and the arrangements made with the United States would insure the stability of the Chinese currency, and this would inevitably lead to greater economic improvement and prosperity of the Chinese people.

Arrangements have now been made through which the government of China will purchase from the United States Treasury a substantial amount of gold. To aid the Chinese government thus to augment its gold reserves, and in accordance with the terms of the United States silver-purchase act of 1934, the United States Treasury will purchase an additional amount of silver from the Chinese government.

The United States Treasury will also broaden the scope of the arrangements under which the Central Bank of China has been enabled, under conditions which safeguard the interests of both countries, to obtain dollar exchange for currency stabilization purposes.

Both the Secretary of the Treasury and the Finance Minister of China are greatly gratified by the beneficial results to both countries which have been the consequence of the understanding reached last year, and they are equally gratified to be able to announce further progress in their co-operation. It is a source of satisfaction to them that the program of monetary reforms and currency stabilization in China has been carried out with great success and has been accompanied by an increase of trade between China and other nations, particularly the United States, which occupies the first place in China's foreign trade.

Because of his desire to express the appreciation of the Chinese government and the people of China, the Chinese Minister of Finance came in person to the United States to conduct the negotiations which have just been concluded.

The Secretary of the Treasury greatly appreciates having had this opportunity for personal contact with the Finance Minister of China and of undertaking in conference with him to further the welfare of both countries.

Motorist Doubly Wrong In Horn Blowing Episode

Boston, July 9 (AP).—Walter D. Murphy is puzzled.

District Court Judge John Duff today fined him $1 for blowing his horn unnecessarily and disturbing people—and then levied a fine of $2 against Walter for not blowing his horn. The judge told Murphy motorists must learn to use good judgment. Murphy, the judge said, decided there was an emergency "and began sounding your horn after the emergency was over."

Walter paid the fines—but Walter is still puzzled.

Irish Laborites Plan 'Independent Policy'

Dublin, Irish Free State, July 9 (AP).—The Irish Free State Labor Party, with 13 members in the new Dail (Parliament), declared tonight it will pursue a policy of complete independence. Labor holds the balance of power in the Dail since President Eamon de Valera's party failed to win a majority in the elections.

Drivers Aid Tax Drive.

St. Louis, July 9 (AP).—The latest thing in windshield stickers is a "pay your taxes" reminder. The stickers made their appearance today as a part of the city's delinquent tax collection campaign. Motorists were given the stickers at filling stations. The city has threatened to hike the gasoline tax one-half cent a gallon unless tax collections provide needed municipal revenue by October 1.

Japanese Air Pioneer Dies.

Tokyo, July 9 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Kenjiro Nagasawa, president of the Kumagai aviation school and one of the pioneers of aviation in Japan, was killed today when his monoplane crashed in a fog near Fukushima.

Intrepid blazer of new skyway trails,
Winged goddess, smiling, nonchalant and game,
No tragedy can dim your brilliant star,
No blow of fate can crush your well-won game.
You seem a throwback to some more golden age—
Reincarnation of some fabled maid,
Destined to deeds heroic beyond words,
Born to dare death, undaunted, unafraid.

II.

You knew the perils of your chosen work
And sensed that Death rode ever at your side;
You knew the dangers, yet you took the chance
And sailed uncharted courses far and wide . . .
Around the world by plane! Ah, what a flight!
A matchless, brilliant saga of the air,
Yet you, a woman, faced the hazards dark,
And with some lilting laughter, said "I dare!"

III.

The fog, the ice, the darkness and the gale,
The specters that forever set the pace—
You lightly matched your wits against them all
And flung your challenge in each creature's face.
Yours was a world of goddesses and gods—
For such as snap their fingers at the leer
Of all the evil forces of defeat
And know all feelings save the one called fear.

IV.

Disaster had caught up with you before,
But you had stared it down and flown again,
No more intimidated by its glare
Than Sparta's ancient women would have been.
"Trail's end!"—You heard that whisper through the day;
And through those long nights flyers can't forget.
You smiled the smile the world has come to know
And, speeding up the plane, had said "Not yet!"

Now are you with the brave ones of the past?
Or on some atoll far from rescue crew?
Would that it might develop you are safe
Aboard some small craft out there on the blue!
"The splendor of the things I see" . . . these words
Were spoken by you not so long ago.
If you have perished may these splendors seem
As nothing to the greater ones you know!

Gov. Nice Calls Jackson's Hopes 'Summer Dream'

Annapolis, Md., July 9 (AP).—Mayor Howard W. Jackson's gubernatorial aspirations are just a "midsummer night's dream" to Gov. Harry W. Nice at the moment—he's a good deal more worried about the heat.

Maryland's Republican governor, embarking on the State yacht Du Pont for a week-end cruise on Chesapeake Bay, refused to comment today on the announcement of Baltimore's mayor as a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination in 1938.

"No, I will make no comment," the Governor said. It's a midsummer night—what is the line I want? Oh: It's a midsummer night's dream to me.

"Being a gentleman of some avoirdupois, to whom the heat is an irritant, I find politics just an added irritant and I am not thinking of politics right now."

He refused to indicate whether or not he will be a candidate for re-election.

Troyanovsky Quits U.S.; Won't Replace Litvinoff

New York, July 9 (AP).—Alexander Troyanovsky, Soviet Ambassador to Washington, sailed today on the Ile de France for a two months vacation at home.

"I return to this country in September," he said. His statement was in answer to a question whether he was slated to replace Foreign Affairs Commissar Maxim Litvinoff.

The ambassador's wife and son, Olig, sailed with him.

Jews, Arabs Hit Partition Plan For Palestine

Both Factions Gird for Fight on Britain's Proposal for Separation.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, July 9.—Both Jews and Arabs, although disagreeing among themselves, plunged tonight into the work of organizing opposition to Great Britain's plan to partition Palestine.

The Jewish Labor Party met to try to form a united front against the report of the British royal commission that proposed cleaving the Holy Land into a Jewish state, an Arab state and a British mandated territory.

The Labor Party polled more than 60 per cent of the Zionist vote in elections this week, evidence of its sway over the Jewish population.

The staunchest opposition within the party to the partition plan came from the communal agricultural groups.

The Arab higher committee also took a stand opposed to the plan except for the dissenting Nasha Shibi group.

Most Arabs have contended that creation of an Arab state adjacent to Transjordan would put it in danger of being submerged by other Arab nations in the East.

The committee telegraphed King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia and the Iman of Yemen asking for guidance.

U. S. Views Presented.

London, July 9 (AP).—The United States Government's views on the British plan to partition Palestine were presented to Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden by Ambassador Robert W. Bingham today.

(By an agreement of 1924 Britain undertook not to alter the status of her mandate over Palestine without consultation with the United States.)

U. S. Jews Protest.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull said at his press conference yesterday he had received several letters and telegrams from leaders of Jewish groups in this country voicing opposition to the plan of a British commission to partition Palestine.

The Secretary of State added that this Government was giving full attention to the Palestine problem but that it contemplated no specific action at this time. He said the State Department's study of the situation has involved informal exchange of information with the British government.

Myron Taylor Bid Denied.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday he had not offered a diplomatic post to Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation. Published reports said Taylor was available for appointment as Ambassador to London in the event Robert W. Bingham resigned.

Unknown Soldier's Wife.

Cincinnati, July 9 (AP).—The Cincinnati Public Library was stumped today. Chalmers Hadley, librarian, said the question—submitted in all seriousness—was: "Does the wife of the Unknown Soldier reside in Cincinnati—and if so, what is her name?"

U. S. Will Sell Gold to China And Buy Silver

Agreement Revealed Here by Morgenthau and Kung.

the stability of international exchange generally.

In this connection, this Government also has agreed to "broaden the scope of the arrangements under which the Central Bank of China has been enabled, under conditions which safeguard the interests of both countries, to obtain dollar exchange for currency stabilization purposes." This refers to the arrangement made in May, 1936, the scope of which has not been specifically defined. No further information on that score was available yesterday.

Help For Nanking.

Aside from tightening the economic bonds between this country and China, the new monetary arrangement is regarded as further strengthening the Nanking government of China as a world power and thus enabling it to resist further Japanese encroachments. Within the last ten days this Government also made available for China through the Export-Import Bank a credit advance of $750,000 for the financing of an order for American-built locomotives.

The amounts of gold and silver which will be exchanged by the United States and China under this arrangement were not revealed. Both Morgenthau and Kung, in reply to questions, agreed that it was not wise at this time to disclose the sums involved, which would be valuable information for silver speculators.

Nor was there anything to indicate that the amount of silver which this Government will take from China will offset the value of the gold sold to the Nanking government. The difference, if there is one, might be made up by the transfer of a part of the dollar credits which the Chinese now have on balance in New York, totaling approximately $120,000,000.

In Treasury circles it was explained that the words "substantial amount of gold," as used in the joint statement, might mean $10,000,000 or $50,000,000 of the yellow metal. Consequently, it was believed that the amount of gold figuring in the transaction would fall substantially within these brackets.

Gold to Remain in U. S.

At all events, Morgenthau said that the gold sold to China would come from the Treasury's inactive or sterilized gold fund, which now totals $1,144,510,743. This sterilized gold has been a troublesome problem to the Treasury, but it is doubtful whether the fund will be reduced in any sizable amount by the Chinese transaction. Indeed, the fund in the last month or so has grown at the rate of more than $100,000,000 a week.

The gold this Government will sell to China will be sold at the rate of $35 an ounce, plus a handling charge of one-fourth of 1 per cent. The silver purchased from China will be bought at the current world price, approximately 45 cents an ounce. As soon as the Chinese silver is received, silver certificates in the amount of the cost will be issued against it, thus expanding, temporarily at least, the volume of currency in circulation in this country.

Kung explained that the Chinese would leave the gold they purchase in this country. Since it will be used as a reserve against paper currency in circulation in China, it makes no difference where the gold is stored, he explained. He said that adding of the gold to the reserve against the Chinese currency would increase confidence in his country in the government's monetary measures.

How Plan Will Work.

The mechanics of the arrangement just concluded between the United States and China will be as follows: the Chinese government will ship to the United States Treasury a certain volume of silver bullion, which will be added to the Treasury's silver stocks, now carried on Treasury books at a value of $1,719,000,000, the major part having the monetary value of $1.29 an ounce.

In the amount which the Treasury pays for the Chinese silver, computed at around 45 cents an ounce, the Treasury will issue silver certificates, adding to the $1,300,498,000 of silver certificates now outstanding. These silver certificates, when issued, will cancel out the sum paid China for the silver, through the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

Meanwhile, the Treasury will deliver to the New York Federal Reserve Bank a certain amount of gold to be earmarked and held for the account of China. The reserve bank, as the fiscal agent of China, will pay the Treasury for this gold, drawing against Chinese funds on deposit in New York.

In their joint statement Morgenthau and Kung expressed gratification over the results to both countries of the monetary understanding into which they entered in May, 1936. They also expressed satisfaction over the success of the program of monetary reforms undertaken in China and the increase of trade between the two countries.

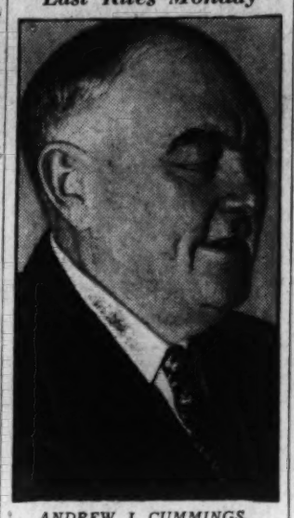
In the first four months of this year American exports to China had a value of $20,378,000, compared to $12,459,000 in the same period of last year. Chinese exports to the United States in the first four months of this year were valued at $39,364,000, compared with $30,458,000 in the same months of last year. Thus, while Chinese exports to this country have increased in value by about 30 per cent over the corresponding period of last year, American exports to China have shown an increase of approximately 65 per cent.

Those present in the Secretary of the Treasury's office when the announcement of the new agreement was made, in addition to Morgenthau and Kung, were the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Chenting T. Wang, P. W. Kuo, director of the bureau of foreign trade, Chinese ministry of the interior; Dr. Jacob Viner, economic adviser to the Treasury, and Archie Lochhead, in charge of the technical operations of the American stabilization fund.

Wife Killer Hanged.

San Quentin, Calif., July 9 (AP).—John D. McNeill, 54, was hanged today for beating his wife to death with the roller of a washing machine because she had not paid premiums on her life insurance. McNeill, a former constable and blacksmith, was carried to the gallows in a comatose condition.

Last Rites Monday



ANDREW J. CUMMINGS.

A. J. Cummings Rites Monday In Chevy Chase

Laurel Race Track Head, Politician Is Dead of Heart Ailment.

Funeral services for Andrew J. "Cy" Cummings, president of the Laurel racing track, probably the most familiar figure in Capital and Maryland racing circles, will be held Monday at 9 a. m., with requiem high mass at Blessed Sacrament Church on Chevy Chase Circle. Burial will be in Forest Glen Cemetery.

Cummings, who was 58 years old, died early Friday morning at Oak Grove, the Chevy Chase home in which he was born. He had been ill for several months, suffering from heart trouble.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Geltha Cummings; a son, Andrew Cummings, jr., and two sisters, Miss Alice Cummnigs and Miss Agnes Cummings.

Cummings served in the Maryland Legislature from Montgomery County from 1906 until 1913, during which time he became a national Democratic figure. It was he who led the Maryland delegation into the camp of Woodrow Wilson at Baltimore in 1912, helping to turn the nomination to Wilson.

On Shipping Board.

In appreciation, Wilson appointed him to the United States Shipping Board. After the World War, he was made chairman of the Federal Excise Board, a commission designed to help enforce prohibition. Although he took an active interest in political matters and led fights for and against legislation throughout his lifetime, he was not a candidate for office following his defeat for a place in the Maryland Legislature in 1924.

For the past 12 years he had devoted most of his energy and time to the promotion of sports—an interest he developed during his student days at Georgetown University, where he was a member of the football team and considered one of the greatest tackles of all time. His son is now a member of the Georgetown squad.

Cummings was the first to introduce skeet shooting to local sportsmen. He was an ardent fox-hunter and for many years kept his own stable of thoroughbreds.

A Giant in Size.

Standing 6 feet and 6 inches, and tipping the scales at 300 pounds, Cummings was an impressive figure. His ready wit and booming cordiality added to his popularity. He was "Cy" even to the younger generation, and his appearances before committees in behalf of horse racing were always colorful occasions.

One of his last efforts was directed against the Maryland "bookie" bill which would have legalized bookmakers. As chairman of the Maryland State Fair Association, he had for 10 years been automatically president of the Laurel race track and an ex-officio member of the Maryland State Racing Commission. It was one of his jobs to see that racing was not overtaxed in his State. This was a duty to which he attended with gusto.

It was not uncommon to see him beaming over a lawmaker in the State capitol, whispering. Whatever the occasion of the conversation, the legislator would end up smiling.

He was a member of the Columbia Country Club, the Alfalfa Club, and the Knights of Columbus.

Sen. Wheeler Assails Court Plan as 'Cheap'

Attacks Bill, Compromise for 3 Hours; Minton Hits at Tribunal.

again when he's accomplished his political purpose," said Minton.

After his sharp collision with the rules, Minton declined to yield to McCarran, who six times took the floor "to ask a question."

In his best speaking fettle, Senator Wheeler had lashed back at charges he had forsaken his former "liberal" friends and was now in "bad company."

Wheeler Not "Ashamed."

"I am with practically every Liberal who has stood on the floor of the Senate and fought for the Liberal cause long before Jim Farley was ever heard of," said the Montanan. "Who is the company I am keeping? Let us call the roll."

He named Senators Shipstead, of Minnesota; Nye and Frazier, of North Dakota; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Borah, of Idaho; Bankhead, of Alabama; Clark, of Missouri; McCarran, of Nevada; Gillette, of Iowa; and Johnson, of California. He said it was company of which he was not "ashamed."

He scoffed at statements he was "breaking the President's heart."

"Oh, dear," he said, "what a pity."

Wheeler said he was the "first man in the Senate" to espouse the President's candidacy.

"Where were you men then, when I was out beating up support for him in the bushes?" he said. "Where were you at Chicago? Some of you thought the lightning was going to strike you at Chicago."

Not Lured by Bench.

Wheeler said "there's no judgeship dangling in front of my face, though. I'm not seeking a place on the Circuit Court of Appeals."

With biting sarcasm he lampooned those he said "can afford to be liberal while holding public office."

"They are liberals only because it is popular to be liberal, it pays to be liberal," he said. "I will be fighting the liberal cause when many of these 'liberal' officeholders are back in the caves of Wall Street. . . . Their liberalism lasts just so long as they get patronage and pap and projects."

Swinging loose-limbed around a desk stacked high with notes, Wheeler from time to time confronted individual Senators and seemingly addressed his remarks to them. He said New England has a word that describes "the sort of discussion that has been taking place on the part of the proponents of the bill." He said the word is "Cheap! Cheap! Cheap!"

Lashes at Farley.

He said it was "cheap" for Postmaster General Farley to remark: "We will let the Senate talk, and then we will let the House talk, then we will call the roll. We have the votes. It is in the bag."

"If Farley was right and it was 'in the bag,' why did the Administration desert the original bill?" Wheeler asked. "Because the great prophet of the Democratic Party was wrong. They did not have the votes. They have not the votes now."

The Senator said it was "cheap for the secretary of the President to say, 'One down and four to go,'" when Justice VanDevanter retired. And he continued:

"It was 'cheap' to make the arguments that have been made to intelligent men on the floor of the Senate. It was 'cheap,' I say, to appeal to members here and say: 'You rode in on the President's coattails, and now you owe it to him to vote as he wants you to vote.'"

Assails "Subterfuge."

Turning to Senator Bilbo, of Mississippi, sitting facing him, Wheeler asked: "Is that what the people of Mississippi sent the Senator from Mississippi to the Senate for?"

Wheeler's first violent onslaught was directed against Administration tactics in support of the measure. He said it had sought, by "subterfuge" and by stirring up "mass prejudices," which it dared not do openly. He charged a violation of the "spirit" of the Constitution which paralleled what had taken place in Russia, Italy and Germany.

DuPont Pilots Glider For 21 Miles in Storm

Elmira, N. Y., July 9 (AP).—Richard C. duPont, of Wilmington, Del., sent his soaring plane into a thunderhead today and rode the storm for 21 miles, the first time the feat has been completed successfully in the National soaring contests here. Storm soaring is regarded by pilots as the "thrill of thrills" because of the danger involved.

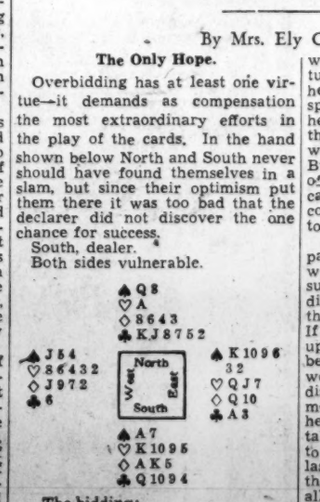
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

The Only Hope.

Overbidding has at least one virtue—it demands as compensation the most extraordinary efforts in the play of the cards. In the hand shown below North and South never should have found themselves in a slam, but since their optimism put them there it was too bad that the declarer did not discover the one chance for success.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
6 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's second bid was distinctly out of line. He had already given one jump raise and aside from distribution his hand was really not so powerful. Four clubs would have been ample as the response to three hearts.

West opened the deucé of diamonds, dummy ducksd, and East's Queen went to the Ace. A low heart was led to the Ace and a spade return put South on lead again. The heart King was cashed and dummy's spade Queen discarded. The ten of hearts, ruffed in dummy, established the nine-spot, since East had started with only three to the Queen-Jack. But this did no good, as only one of dummy's diamonds could be discarded, and declarer finally had to concede a diamond trick in addition to the club Ace.

Searching analysis on declarer's part would have disclosed that there was only one line of play that might succeed. After winning the first diamond, a heart should be led to the Ace and a low club returned. If then and there East failed to put up his club Ace, the contract would be as good as fulfilled. Declarer would win and cash the heart King, discarding—not a spade—but a diamond from dummy. The ten of hearts, ruffed in dummy, would establish the nine-spot and a diamond to the King would take away East's last exit card. Now declarer could throw East on lead with a trump, or allow him to ruff the heart nine with the trump Ace. In either case East would have to lead away from his spade King up to the combined tenace.

The point was that declarer's hearts were vital to the discarding of dummy's diamonds, and that the spade loser would have to be avoided by means of a throw-in play. Of course if East were to pop up with his club Ace on the first trump lead and exit with anything but a spade, defeat would be inevitable.

Ease Today In Teaching Is Assailed

Miss Rose Swart, 90, Thinks Move Has Gone Too Far.

Some Things Necessary to Learn, Veteran Educator Says.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

The trend in education, started 50 years ago, toward making instruction "easy to take," has gone too far, in the opinion of Miss Rose C. Swart, veteran educator and for half a century a teacher of teachers. Miss Swart, now 90 years of age, has resided in the District since 1928. Among other distinctions, she has that of being the oldest member of the District of Columbia branch of the League of Women Voters.

"We may be sorry for children because they must learn the multiplication table, but nevertheless they must learn it," said Miss Swart. "The teacher should feel required to make what she teaches interesting rather than to follow the whimsy of the child. Children have not yet developed interests. What it is necessary for them to learn, the teacher should present in so interesting a way as to make it desirable to them."

Still Young At 90 Years

The statement that Miss Swart has passed her ninetieth birthday demands the explanation that she is still a "young" woman so far as her interests and activities are concerned. A short time ago she visited Greenbelt to see for herself the Federal housing project. She also went to the National Training School for Girls, interested in observing, first hand, the improvements made since the League of Women Voters inaugurated the campaign for the correction of conditions which formerly obtained there. She is still the alert, keenly observant student of affairs she was during the years she directed the Teacher Training School at the State Normal in Oshkosh, Wis.

She began her teaching in the normal school there as principal of the primary department. The president of the institution suggested starting a practice school and this she organized—the first in the State. She received the hnorary degree of master of arts from the University of Wisconsin in 1895. She resigned from her position at the Oshkosh Normal to retire in 1922, returning to her childhoid home in Pennsylvania to reside. In 1929 she went back to Oshkosh to be present at the dedication of the new Rose C. Swart Training School, named in her honor.

Many Well-Known Persons, Former Students

Among well-known men and women who have been her students are Representative Michael K. Reilly, Dr. B. H. Meyer, of the Interstate Commerce Commission; Miss Anna Halberg, of Wilson Teachers College; Edward Weber Allen, of the International Fisheries Commission, in Seattle, augther of the recent book, "North Pacific;" William H. Lough, economist and author, and his brother, Dr. James E. Lough, educator, of New York. She has taught two generations and seen the third enter schools during her long service to education.

Miss Swart and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Catherine C. Swart, make their home together here and both are active members of the Ladies' Aid and Mission Circle of the Universalist Church, of which Dr. Frederick W. Perkins is pastor. "All of Wisconsin must have gone to school to you," Dr. Perkins once remarked when she introduced "another of my students" to him.

Miss Swart also is a member of the American Association of University Women, the League of Republican Women and of the Wayne Chapter of the D. A. R., in Honesdale, Pa., her birthplace. She was for many years a member of the National Woman Suffrage Association, and went from that into the League of Women Voters. She attended the "swan song" meeting of the suffrage group, at which Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt presided, closing its business and instituting the league to educate women for the intelligent use of the vote they had won.

The most recent "News Letter" issued by the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters contains a letter from Miss Swart which tells better than the words of another of her forceful character:

I have been a member of the League of Women Voters since its beginning so many years ago—a member first in Wisconsin, then in Pennsylvania, and now in Washington.

No longer able to be an active member, I sit on the side lines and watch the Washington Voteless League take its stride.

Your bulletin is the means by which I do this, and I read it monthly from the quill at the top to the last word on the last page. I finish it with pride in the sincere spirit, in the definiteness of purpose and in the accomplishments it records.

It comes to me as the mouthpiece of a band of devoted, highly intelligent, highly efficient women, bent on making first, a better city for us to live in, and beyond that, a better world.

Comptometer Club Event Is Scheduled for Friday Night.

The first meeting of the new administration of Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, was held at Moose Hall last night, with Senior Regent Mrs. Robert Baldwin presiding.

Reports of the district conference conducted at Lebanon, Pa., July 3, 4 and 5, were made by Past Regents Mrs. Wade H. Mitchell, Mrs. E. T. Deegan, Mrs. George B. Clark and Mrs. Anna Wagner, who represented the chapter at the conference. The district conference for next year will be held at Annapolis. A marching club was organized by Mrs. Clark to have the chapter participate in the parade in connection with the Annapolis conference. Every member present joined the club.

Mrs. Baldwin announced the following committee chairmen for the current year: Mrs. H. J. Clark, membership; Mrs. Mitchell, publicity; Mrs. Emil Rada, Moseheart; Mrs. Deegan, Moosehaven; Mrs. Clark, alumni; Mrs. Wagner, ritualistic; Mrs. Mae Sine, home making; Mrs. Hans Sorenson, social service; Mrs. Samuel Miller, child care and training; Mrs. Anna Sullivan, library; Mrs. Emily Giles, ways and means; Mrs. Clark, convention club; Mrs. Jack Phythian, delinquent, and Mrs. Margaret Bates, emblem.

These chairmen were requested to meet with the officers at Moose Hall Thursday at 8 p. m. to outline plans for the coming season.

Supper in Honor Of Dr. Sebree Set for Sunday

MRS. FREDERICK CROCKER, president of Alpha Chapter of Phi Delta Gamma Sorority, has issued invitations for a buffet supper at her home in Chevy Chase Sunday night in honor of Dr. Margaret Sebree. Mrs. Sebree, who is national president of the sorority, sails July 26 with her husband, Dr. J. Emmett Sebree, to spend six weeks in Europe.

The latter is a delegate from the comparative law section of the D. C. Bar Association to the International Bar Convention at The Hague. They will spend a week there and will also be entertained a week in Paris and four days in London. They expect to visit Berlin, Prague, Vienna and Rome before their return to Washington.

Mrs. Sebree as well as her husband, is a member of the D. C. Bar. She has done all her studying in law since her marriage, having registered for her first course on the day she and Dr. Sebree returned from their wedding trip.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

REPRESENTATIVE CAROLINE O'DAY, a member of Congress interested in doing whatever she can to promote sentiment for peace, is opening her home Wednesday afternoon for a meeting of World Peace Ways. The organization has several members, but no active group, in Washington. Miss Louise Lazelle, formerly identified with the Good Neighbor League, is one of the moving spirits in this peace plan.

Its mission—and the various peace societies never overlap in their work—is to picture the horrors of war through advertising. World Peace Ways uses magazines and billboards to arouse public sentiment through showing pictures of war as it is. In the opinion of members of the organization this kind of propaganda counteracts that which paints conflict as brave and glorious.

Representative O'Day opened her home not many weeks ago for a tea given by the People's Mandate Committee. The World Peace Ways meeting also will be a tea, at 5:30, and will be attended by about 50 guests. Plans will be discussed for a large meeting here in September, at which Estelle Sternberger, executive director, and other peace leaders of prominence will speak.

AN "ALL-PORTIA" luncheon was given at the Carlton yesterday in honor of Miss Helen Halverson, of Kimball, S. Dak., an attorney and member of Kappa Beta Pi, women's legal fraternity.

The guests included Miss Elizabeth F. MISS FRANCES HAYS, education secretary of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, will be instructor and chief speaker next week at the five-day parent-teacher conference opening Monday at the University of Maryland. It is being conducted by the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers in cooperation with the University School of Education. Mrs. H. Ross Coppage, of Baltimore, State P.-T. A. president, is in charge of arrangements.

A large delegation of District P.-T. A. members will attend, headed by Mrs. Walter B. Fry, District president. The purpose of the conference is to train leaders for parent-teacher work and to provide instruction in P.-T. A. organization methods for teachers and prospective teachers attending the university's summer session.

Miss Hays is, first of all, a teacher. She has taught in the State Teachers colleges in Emporia, Kans., and in Bellingham, Wash. It was as a student of education that she became convinced that the parent-teacher movement is the main instrumentality for unifying the various environmental factors which contribute to the education of children and youth.

Miss Hayes also is a trained social worker and a member of the American Social Workers Association. Her experience in the social field has been in the home service department of the American Red Cross, the Public Welfare Department, Portland, Oreg., and as field secretary for the State Child Welfare Commission of Oregon.

As national chairman of juvenile protection, she served on the national board of managers for two years. She became a member of the staff of the national congress in 1924 and has served in various capacities, including field service, research and information.

Bar Unit Sails Down Potomac

Singing, Dancing, Meeting of Committees Feature Annual Cruise.

Miss Vera McGonigal heads the committee in charge of arrangements for a cruise aboard the S. S. Potomac, planned by the Washington Comptometer Club for Friday evening of next week. Assisting her are Miss Agatha Perry, Mr. Lawrence Harris and Mr. William Fallon, who is in charge of reservations.

Although it is the policy of many clubs to discontinue their meetings during the summer months, the Washington Comptometer Club has decided to continue its sessions. The club is sponsoring several activities, such as tennis, horseback and bicycle riding, which are attended by interested club members.

The Washington Comptometer Club was organized in December, 1936. Since that time several successful dances and other social functions have been given. Comptometer operators who are not members of the club have been invited to come and bring their friends on the cruise.

Henry N. Brawner Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Henry N. Brawner, 62, president of the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, will be held today at 2 p. m. at St. Alban's Church.

Moose Women Receive Report

Delegates to Conference Review Program; Club Is Organized.

Two hundred members of the Federal Bar Association and their guests last night attended the association's annual cruise down the Potomac aboard the S. S. City of Washington. Mr. William N. Morell, chairman of the social committee, was in charge of arrangements.

Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen and Senator and Mrs. Pat McCarran were guests of honor and received with Mr. Horace Russell, general counsel for the Home Owners Loan Corporation, who is president of the organization, and Mrs. Russell, as the guests came on the boat.

An informal musical program was provided by Mr. John T. Vance, of the Library of Congres, who played guitar accompaniments to familiar songs which were sung by a quartette including himself, Mr. William A. Roberts, Mr. Harold Jacobson, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Mr. Keith Moyer, of the Postoffice Department. Representative Byron B. Harlan, of Ohio, also was present to help with the singing.

There was general dancing with several contests, judged by Maj. Wallace Streetor, Judge Samuel Wassell, of the Department of Justice, and Capt. John C. Fisher, of the Board of Veterans' Appeals.

Among special guests were Mrs. Lucy Howorth, Mr. Mastin G. White, solicitor of the Department of Agriculture, and Mrs. White; Mr. F. Regis Noel, president of the District Bar Association; Federal Trade Commissioner and Mrs. Robert Freer and Mr. Peyton Evans, solicitor for the Farm Credit Administration.

Huge Harvests Of Wheat, Corn Are Predicted

Farm Bill's Chance Gains; Roosevelt Again Pledges to Urge Passage.

tives are fearful the big crops mean declines next year.

This drive for action will be intensified, it is expected, when President Roosevelt send to Congress today or Monday a new statement of his belief legislation is needed now. The President reiterated at his press conference yesterday his intention of sending such a statement.

On Capitol Hill, however, these advocates suffered a distinct setback. Opponents of the President's court plan declined the required unanimous consent to permit Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), Idaho, to offer a general farm bill. It appeared they would permit no action whatever on farm or other bills until the court plan is disposed of.

Whatever the need for legislation to safeguard prices next year, farmers have little cause for complaint on that score this year.

Prices at Chicago yesterday indicated the heavy crops will bring rich dividends to the farms.

Level Prices Expected.

Wheat hovered between $1.22 and $1.25 a bushel; corn between $1.27 and $1.29 for new July corn and 85 to 83 cents for September. Winnipeg wheat prices were approximately 20 cents a bushel higher.

Crop report anticipation is expected to hold American prices at near yesterday's level.

Coincident with the report was one of the Canadian bureau of statistics, the Associated Press reported from Ottawa, which said June witnessed the most serious crop deterioration ever recorded in the Dominion's prairie provinces so early in the season.

The spring wheat crop declined to 51 per cent of normal.

Tobacco, Apples Flourish.

Tobacco and apples, in which nearby Maryland and Virginia are deeply interested, will yield crops far surpassing those of 1936, the report also said. A national tobacco production of 1,420,943,000 pounds, as against 1,153,083,000 last year, was predicted, while the apple output is expected to be 194,328,000 bushels this year as compared with 117,506,000 last year.

Maryland farmers also may anticipate golden returns from corn and wheat, on the basis of the department's figures. The State has in prospect an 18,576,000-bushel corn crop and a 9,120,000-bushel winter wheat crop.

Production of other crops, as indicated from July 1 conditions, with comparative figures for last year was reported as follows:

Oats, 1,111,229,000 bushels, compared with 789,100,000.
Barley, 243,540,000 bushels, compared with 147,452,000.
Rye, 50,398,000 bushels, compared with 25,554,000.
Flaxseed, 7,622,000 bushels compared with 5,908,000.
Rice, 48,716,000 bushels, compared with 46,833,000.
Hay (tame), 75,321,000 tons compared with 63,309,000.
Beans (dry edible), 13,163,000 bags (of 100 lbs.), compared with 11,122,000.
Potatoes, 404,229,000 bushels, compared with 329,997,000.
Sweet potatoes, 72,706,000 bushels, compared with 64,144,000 and 66,368,000.
Sugar beets, 8,952,000 tons, compared with 9,028,000.
Hops, 44,720,000 pounds, compared with 23,310,000.

Mrs. Truesdell Funeral Rites Set for Today

Funeral services will be held today for Mrs. Frances Martha Truesdell, 93, widow of George Truesdell, who was appointed District Commissioner during President Cleveland's Administration. Services will be held at Hysong's funeral parlor at 10 a. m., with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Born in Vermont, Mrs. Truesdell came to Washington when Col. Truesdell, then in the Union Army, entered the office of the paymaster general. Col. Truesdell was appointed District Commissioner in 1894.

The daughter of the Rev. Cyrus Prindle, Mrs. Truesdell moved to Syracuse, N. Y., where she married Col. Truesdell in December, 1864. Making their home in the Washington Heights Development near the site of the present Altamont Apartments, their home was described as one of the most attractive in Washington. Mrs. Truesdell was living at the Altamont when she died.

Mrs. Truesdell is survived by a niece, Mrs. Fanny Johnson. Fred Truesdell, a son, died in New York several months ago.

Woman, 60, Dies Of Burns Suffered In Cleaning Room

Mrs. Mollie Johnson, 60, of 1447 Fairmont street northwest, died last night in Emergency Hospital from burns suffered when gasoline she was using to clean a bedroom ignited and spread to her clothing.

Miss Mildred Summers, a roomer, said she heard Mrs. Johnson's screams and found her enveloped in flames.

Firemen extinguished the fire in the room. Damage was slight.

M. P. Hill, Jr., Bride, On Wedding Tour

Couple Will Reside in North Carolina.

Mr. and Mrs. Millard P. Hill, jr., are on a honeymoon trip through the Berkshires. They will return by way of Boston and will make their home in Oxford, N. C.

Their wedding took place at Epiphany Episcopal Church Saturday evening, July 3. The Rev. Richard Annesley Cartnell officiated.

The bride, who has made her home in Washington for the past two years, wore a gown of flesh-colored satin, fashioned along princess lines with a long coat of angel-skin lace of the same color. She wore a pale pink picture hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of pink rosebuds and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor, Miss Eva Walker, of Spencer, N. C., appeared in a Wallis blue silk lace dress with large picture hat to match and carried a bouquet of talisman roses.

The best man was Mr. Frank Hughes, of Washington.

A reception was held after the wedding at the bride's home. Besides the bride's family, other out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. E. King, of Burlington, N. C.; Mrs. G. P. Deare, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Harry Frantz, of Baltimore

Miss Ida Meeks Sister-in-Law's Guest at Tea

Wives of Congressmen Living at the Wardman Attend Party.

Mrs. James A. Meeks, wife of Representative Meeks, of Illinois, entertained at tea yesterday in honor of her sister-in-law, Miss Ida V. Meeks, of San Diego, Calif.

The party was given on the solarium of the Wardman Park Hotel, and guests were wives of the Congressional delegation making their homes at Wardman.

Approximately a dozen States were represented at the gathering, which featured a "question match," with the honor guest asking each of the other guests one question regarding their respective districts, and each in turn asking her one question about her home in California.

After all guests had in turn pointed out the advantages of their home districts, each accused the others of being employed by the local chamber of commerce.

Later, the party developed into an old-fashioned sewing bee, with each guest working on some piece of handwork—a popular summer diversion of many Congressional wives who are remaining in Washington with their husbands until Congress adjourns.

Refreshments were served late in the afternoon. Miss Meeks will be here for several days and will be extensively entertained.

Among those attending the party were Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, Mrs. John O'Connell, Mrs. Paul Maloney, Mrs. Alfred Bulwinkle, Mrs. Claude Fuller, Mrs. William Arnold and Mrs. John Overton.

Miss Carlyn Kaufman Is Bride Of Sol Greenberg at Mayflower Couple on Cruise to Bermuda; Will Reside at Shoreham.

The marriage of Miss Carlyn Kaufman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kaufman, and Sol Greenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Greenberg, took place yesterday at 12:30 o'clock at the Mayflower. The Rev. Alexander Goode officiated in the presence of members of the immediate families.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a suit of white crepe and wool, trimmed in bands of white fox, her hat was halo style, and she wore a corsage of purple orchids.

Mrs. Jack Shulman, the bride's sister and her only attendant, wore a frock of navy and chartreuse silk and wool with an off-the face hat of chartreuse, and shoes and gloves to match. Her shoulder corsage was of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley.

Milton Greenberg, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at an oval-shaped table decorated with summer flowers and centered with a wedding cake.

Mrs. Kaufman, mother of the bride, was attired in an aquamarine ensemble, fashioned with a cape and set off with a wide-brimmed straw hat. Her shoulder corsage was of sweetheart roses and liles of the valley. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Greenberg, wore a frock of purple-flowered chiffon with a white picture hat and accessories to match, and a shoulder corsage similar to Mrs. Kaufman's.

Following the breakfast, the young couple left for New York. They will sail today on the S. S. Monarch of Bermuda for a cruise to Bermuda. The bride's traveling costume was a blue and white ensemble.

Upon their return to Washington Mr. and Mrs. Greenberg will be at home at the Shoreham.

Wed Here at St. Paul's Catholic Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Emil Anderson are on a Northern trip for their honeymoon. Mrs. Anderson was formerly Miss Margaret Mary Delaney, daughter of Mrs. John A. Delaney and the late Mr. Delaney.

Their wedding was at 9 o'clock Wednesday, June 30, at St. Paul's Catholic Church. The Rev. John F. Delany, S. J., of Canisius College, Buffalo, N. Y., brother of the bride, officiated.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Francis Delaney, the bride wore a long redingote of white chantilly lace made over satin. The gown had long sleeves puffed on the shoulders and fitted in points at the wrists. Her veil of tulle fell from a cap of lilies of the valley and she carried calla lilies.

Miss Sara B. McGrann was maid of honor, wearing turquise lace made over taffeta, with a matching jacket and small tulle turban. She carried talisman roses.

Mr. Stewart McGee, of Rocky Mount, N. C., was best man. Mr. Walter Delaney acted as usher.

Following the wedding a breakfast was given at the Garden T Shoppe, attended by members of the bridal party, the family, and a few close friends.

Miss Mona Catherine Sheehan Becomes Bride in Rochester

Bridegroom Is Bartholomew Aloysius Diggins; Rev. Henri Weisel, S.J., Headmaster of Georgetown Preparatory School, Officiates.

Of wide interest in the Capital was the wedding on July 3 in Rochester, N. Y., when Miss Mona Catherine Sheehan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Joseph Sheehan, became the bride of Bartholomew Aloysius Diggins of Washington and Rochester.

The ceremony was performed in the Sacred Heart Church, with the Rev. Henri Weisel, S. J., headmaster of Georgetown Preparatory School, and cousin of the bridegroom, officiating.

The bride was gowned in a Molyneux model of white taffeta faille fashioned in empire style. Her long veil fell from a small cap of tulle, caught with a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a white prayer book from which fell a shower of ribbons and lilies of the valley.

Miss Julia Diggins, of Washington, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Vera Fullaytar, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Miss Julia Brick, of Rochester. They wore dresses alike in empire frocks of white marquisette with bolero jackets edged with white pleating and sashes of fuschia-colored velvet ribbon reaching to the hems of the dresses.

Wore Short Veils Similar to Bride's

All the bride's attendants wore short veils similar to hers, with narrow bands of fuschia edging the caps. The junior bridesmaid, Miss Ann Noonan, of Newark, niece of the bride, wore an empire dress of white taffeta and net with a head band of fuschia ribbon. She carried a bouquet of pansies.

William Madden, of Washington, was best man. Ushers were James O'Donnell, Robert Dillon and A. Phillip Kane, of Washington, and Gerard Ryan, of New York.

Immediately after the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to relatives, members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests at the home of Mrs. James L. Angle, sister of the bride. A reception was held in the afternoon.

The bride's mother wore a frock of black and white flowered chiffon with a black hat and a corsage of white orchids. The bridegroom's mother was attired in black and white chiffon with a black hat. She also wore an orchid corsage.

Many Washingtonians Present at Wedding

Among Washingtonians who attended the wedding were Mrs. Margaret Diggins, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Ryan, Noland Ryan, Miss Lenore Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. William Madden, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dillon, Mr. and Mrs. A. Phillip Kane, Miss Mary McCormick, James O'Donnell and Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Garges.

Mr. and Mrs. Diggins are on a wedding trip to Saranac Inn, Saranac, N. Y. After August 15, they will be at home at the Hastings Apartments on Lake avenue, in Rochester.

Raymond Spinks Leave for Canada After Marriage Honeymoon at Pineview.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond B. Spinks are now on a wedding trip to New York and Quebec, Canada. Their marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milford C. Smith, of Pine View, Va., at noon Monday. It was an out-door wedding, on the beautifully decorated front lawn. The Rev. Barnett Grimsley, of New Baltimore, officiated under the arbor of wisteria and roses.

The bride, who was escorted by her father, wore a gown of dotted swiss, a dainty veil and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white roses. The matron of honor, sister of the bride, Mrs. Melvin F. Harrison, of Washington, D. C., wore a blue dotted swiss dress and a hat to match. Her bouquet was of pink roses.

The flower girl, Willa June Smith, youngest sister of the bride, wore a long pink gown and made a path of roses for the bride as she advanced to meet Mr. Spinks and the best man, Mr. William Blankenbaker, of Washington, both of whom were attired in white flannels. The music was played by Mrs. Roderick Daffan, of Morrisville, Va. After the wedding, which was witnessed by about 150 relatives and friends, a buffet luncheon was served on the porch.

Mr. and Mrs. Spinks will make their home in Alcova Heights, Virginia, near Washington.

Water Games Played in the Pool at Wardman.

Miss Patsy Brewer was hostess at an informal swim-dance party at the Wardman Park Hotel last evening. At 8 o'clock she received her guests at the pool, where swimming was the order of the program until 10. Water games, including checkers and ping-pong, played on specially built tables fashioned to float in the pool, were popular diversions.

Following the swim guests gathered in the Metronome room for dancing. Among those present were Jane Smith, Katharine Egan, Jane Egan, Dorothy Johnston, Virginia McReynold, Barbara Johnston, Virginia Cummings, Alice Clarke, Ann Thompson, Connie Hunt, Perce Michael, Johnny Hamilton, Lidston Russell, Beondie Waddell, Jack McLaughlin, Buddy Bear, Charlie Thompson, Bill Arnold and Powell Blair.

Miss Emma Carr Wed in Waterford

Miss Emma Frances Carr, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Carr, and Paul Kemper Gentry, son of Mrs. B. P. Gentry, of Centerville, Va., were married Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents in Waterford, Va.

The ceremony was performed before an improvised altar, with the Rev. R. A. Bergdoll, pastor of the Sterling Methodist Church, officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown of white lace and chiffon voile. A small lace cap fitted close to her head and the wedding ring was fashioned from one worn by her grandmother, the late Mrs. Albert Vandevanter. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Shirley Myers, of Leesburg, was the matron of honor and the bride's only attendant. She wore orchid chiffon and carried talisman roses. Roger Spindle, of Centerville, was the best man.

A small reception followed the ceremony, when the bride and bridegroom were assisted in receiving by the bride's mother, who wore a costume of wine chiffon, and the bridegroom's mother, who wore navy silk crepe. The bride and bridegroom left later for a wedding trip, the bride wearing a yellow crepe ensemble with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Leesburg.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"Some People Say the Way to Attract a Man Is to Be Independent; Is This True?" Asks Girl.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some people say the way to attract a young man is to act independent. Do you think this is true?. There is a young man who interests me very much. We aren't very well acquainted, although I see him nearly every day and he seems a little bit interested in me. We are members of the same faith and go to the same church. Both of us are considered attractive and neither of us have any bad habits. I would like to know him better; to have his friendship; but I don't want to seem bold. Have you any suggestions? Any advice will be appreciated.

T. P. M.

DEAR T. P. M.: No doubt you have heard the trite old saying, "He who would have friends must show himself friendly." Like all proverbs, it conveys a great deal of truth in a very few words. I believe friends accrue in ample number to the person who has a genuine, unselfconscious liking for his fellowmen; who is readier to perceive their finer qualities than to note their possible faults and failings, and who registers his appreciation of these finer qualities in a spontaneous, generous way, without stopping to wonder whether he or she is being bold in showing sincere appreciation and responsiveness.

• • • •

Since you admire this young man and feel that he would be a congenial companion, why not assume toward him an attitude which radiates friendly interest? When your path crosses his, smile at him with friendship in your eyes, say "good morning," or "hello," or "how are you?" in a cordial way. Be simple, natural, unaffected; avoid coquettishness and coyness; don't try to "act independent;" remember that genuinely affectionate interest in any given person usually evokes a similar response in return.

M. H.

Wants Social Ease.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 17 years old and my problem has to do with an inferiority complex with a lack of self confidence. Knowing that confidence in one's self is an important social asset, and that others usually accept a person at the same evaluation he places upon himself, I would like to know how to acquire it for myself. I would certainly appreciate any help you can give me along this line.

• • • •

So often, when meeting people, I get the impression that they don't like me and, being sensitive, this hurts me; especially since I try so hard to make them like me. What can I do to overcome this sensitivity? TROUBLED.

• • • •

On Making Friends.

DEAR TROUBLED: Good appearance, of course, is highly important in creating a spontaneously favorable first impression; and so are gentle (or shall we say gracious?) manners, which spring from a kindly heart ever concerned with putting the other person at ease. When you can divert your thoughts from the impression you are creating—or would like to create—and can concentrate on making the party of the second part feel interesting, admirable and appreciated, you will have gone a long way toward solving your problem.

• • • •

That personality blight known as the inferiority complex is not, as you might suppose, so indicative of real humility as it is of intense egotism; of overweening preoccupation with self. The cure, therefore, is to develop an active, kindly, selfless interest in others. I suggest you read both Dale Carnegie's 'How to Win Friends and Influence People," and Dr. Donald Laird's "Why We Don't Like People." The latter title is the author's exquisitely tactful way of approaching his real message, which, in essence, is "why people don't like us." M. H.

• • • •

Literature for Hopeless.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a happy wife for over 40 years, and a happy mother and grandmother today, I wish to thank you for the sane, sensible and spiritually helpful advice you give to those who come to you with their problems. I am especially drawn to the woman who, signing herself Hopeless," in your column of July 4, tells of having lost her grip on life after having left her husband because of his infidelity a year ago. I have some literature which should sustain her though this crisis in her life. It is practical, helpful and easily understood. If I may have her address I shall write to her—with your approval. Sincerely, MRS. G. H. W.

• • • •

DEAR MRS. G. H. W.: I regret to say I do not have the name or address of the person who signed herself "Hopeless." However, if she wishes to communicate with you through the medium of this column, I shall be glad to forward her letter. Your generous estimate of my efforts is deeply appreciated. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post's Woman's Page.

Woman's Flowers Are an Indication Of Her Good Taste

Perhaps no other part of the well dressed woman's outfit shows her good taste more than the flowers she wears. They must look as if they really belonged where they are worn and are not mere afterthoughts. It is not the type or quantity of flowers which count, for sometimes even a tiny nosegay or cluster of blooms worn as a clip on the neckline or tucked in the edge of short puffed sleeves properly sets off a stunning gown, while a gorgeous shoulder bouquet might appear ungainly and awkward.

A dress with a plain neckline is often improved by a fairly large cluster of fresh flowers that effectively breaks up the severity of the line. Three of the beautiful new shaggy white chiffon daisies worn in this way on a dress of gray crepe are shown in the illustration.

Some of the finest double asters, colorful dahlias, and later on the disbudded chrysanthemums are equally effective when worn in this simple triangular arrangement without ribbon or foliage of any sort.

A corsage of this type is appropriate for either afternoon or sports wear as well as for dinner or evening wear. Flowers for sport or street wear may be in brighter colors and gayer combinations than for more formal wear.

Summer Meals Of Vegetables Save Cooking

LARGE SUPPLIES of vegetables are coming into city markets and, generally speaking, they are very reasonable. Fresh vegetables are healthful and when prepared as the main course of a summer meal, cooking time is reduced and the housewife has more free time.

The Post Recipe Contest for this week is for vegetable dishes. Perhaps you have a recipe which will win a cash prize for you in this contest. These awards are $3, first prize; $2, second prize, and $1 for each of three additional prizes.

Do you have a recipe for asparagus baked in cheese sauce, stuffed green peppers, baked lima beans, string beans with tomato and bacon, cabbage balls, cabbage casserole with tomato and rice, potato and celery casserole, or dandelion greens au gratin? Or is your recipe for casserole of egg plant, mushroom pie, stuffed, baked tomatoes, vegetable salad, or some other interesting vegetable dish?

Copy your recipe neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post food editor, so she will receive it not later than Saturday noon. Write your name and address on your recipe.

Only one recipe will be accepted from each contestant.

Tower Sandwiches for Outdoor Meal

Outdoor eating is becoming more and more prevalent. Have the food for a porch or garden meal simple and easy-to-prepare yet interesting. These individual club sandwiches are attractive and different to serve and will surprise your guests when they cut into them. Tower sandwiches may be made of a combination of layers as sliced tomato, cheese and crab salad or chicken salad, cheese and olive.

Outdoor Eating Grows Popular With All Classes for Summer

Salads and Frosted Sandwiches Are Ideal for Meals in the Open; Simple Foods With Iced Drinks Are Most Welcome.

By Rebekah Blake.

NOWADAYS, gardens are noted, not so much for moonlight and sighs as for the perfect setting they make for dining in the open. Who is there that says that a luncheon tea or supper—planned to complement the colors and fragrances of a garden background—does not represent the truest kind of romance?

Outdoor eating is one of this summer's most popular sports. It is the latest vogue for all classes of people. Whoever has a garden-spot, whether on a pent-house roof, or in the simplest kind of backyard, does well to plan summer entertaining out-of-doors. Take the inspiration for salads and sandwiches from the colors of a mid-summer garden, plan for a leisurely meal, keep the foods cool and tempting—and watch the guests enjoy a perfectly served summer meal. Simple foods that have been prepared before your guests arrive are most appreciated and easily served at an outside table.

A garden-party sandwich which is as decorative as it is good to eat is a frosted club sandwich. It is more of an Eiffel tower of a sandwich, built on a small scale. This sandwich is a meal in itself. Its foundation is white bread, cut in rounds instead of the familiar squares and diamonds. This small but imposing edifice is built with a layer of tomato, just the size of the rounds of bread on one bread slice, a generous layer of cheese spread on the next and still another layer of crabmeat salad on the third. This combination of sandwich and salad tastes is concealed beneath a frosting of cool cream cheese, which has been softened with milk.

The individual sandwiches, frosted to such a summery whiteness, are ideal as the chief sustenance for bridge party luncheons, high tea, or late supper. Iced coffee, tea, or mint grapejuice—and perhaps a plate of cookies or macaroons or cake complete a festive out-door luncheon.

Although each frosted sandwich looks like the work of a gifted chef, the tempting structures are very simple to make. For fillings, the choice is limited only by the imagination of the hostess. A layer of lettuce, pimiento cheese spread and deviled ham are a trio which might well make any garden-sandwich-party a success. Chicken salad is a happy choice for one of the layers, too.

Most summer hostess find that a generaus supply of cheese spreads, waiting in the refrigerator ready at a moment's call are an indispensable aid to summer entertaining. Any one of a number of delicious varieties will do excellent service in sandwiches and salads the whole summer through. Cream cheese spreads with pineapple, pimiento, olives and other appetite-teasing condiments are in themselves inspiration enough for spur-of-the-moment sandwiches as well as the planned party variety.

Frosted club sandwiches are made as follows:

White bread
Mayonnaise
Sliced tomatoes
Crabmeat salad
Cream cheese with relish
Cream cheese
Milk

Slice the bread and cut it into rounds with a 2¾-inch cutter. Spread one round with mayonnaise; cover it with a slice of peeled tomato, then with a second slice of bread spread with mayonnaise. Spread the top of this round of bread with cream cheese and relish, cover it with the third slice. Spread it with mayonnaise, cover it with a generous amount of crabmeat salad, then with a fourth round slice of bread.

Slightly soften cream cheese with milk and spread it all over the outside of each individual salad and sandwich loaf.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Mucous Colitis.

In describing the colon, or large intestine, in a previous article this week, we said that it was a muscular tube lined with mucous membrane. Mucous membrane normally secrets a certain amount of mucus which is useful for lubrication.

The colon is plentifully supplied with nerves, and though ordinarily sluggish, it sometimes becomes very irritable and spasmodic. Sometimes the mucous glands secrete very large amounts of mucus which create colonic spasm with great pain and discomfort. Just what causes this, varies in different cases. Mostly it occurs in nervous individuals when they are worried or angry or fatigued. In a person susceptible to the condition, a business loss, a family quarrel or an unhappy turn of a love affair will invariably bring on an attack.

All sorts of variations occur. There may be irritable colon entirely without mucus formation. These people form the majority of those who refer to the condition as colitis. It is really not colitis at all, as we pointed out previously, but simply an irritable colon.

This irritable colon causes a heavy dragging sensation and feeling as if bowel were overloaded, which may lead to the cathartic habit. The cathartic habit is one of the prime causes of making an irritable colon worse. I know one physician who got into the bad habit of having a box of senna in his office and taking a dose, as much as he could get on a knife blade, two or three times a day. He finally was seized with such severe cramps that he fainted in his office, and it was found that the inside of the intestine was covered with small hemorrhages.

The treatment of these cases is just opposite of what the patient usually prescribes for himself. A bland, smooth, nonresidue diet, rather than a rough diet, with cathartics. Rest is important, and even if the patient is at work, rest periods two or three times a day should be enjoined. Colonic irrigations, which are the opposite of rest, are very generally condemned. The practice of the so-called internal bath designed to clean out the entire intestine with vigorous irrigations, which was practiced quite extensively a few years ago, has largely been given up. Physiothearapy, in the form of massage and baths, is also helpful. Most important of all is psychotherapy to try to get the patient's mind off his large bowel.

Mr. James Thurber has recently been writing a series of articles commenting on our modern wave of books on psychology, which he has called "Let Your Mind Alone," If the "colitis" patient can be taught to let his bowel alone, he will be halfway to recovery.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 9.

WHENEVER in doubt as to how the public feels about this or that, I go to one of the Translux newsreel theaters, usually the one on Madison avenue, because it is across the street from my favorite ice cream parlor. In the past six months I've noted a complete turnabout of emotional reaction toward half a dozen of the most important people in the world. Our President, for example, was always given a hissing salute up to last election. Now he and Mrs. Roosevelt, too, come in for sincere applause. Postmaster Farley still has a few sibilant enemies who provide the sound effects for his screen appearances. John (C. I. O.) Lewis is hissed in my particular newsreel theater, but in the Broadway Embassy he wins rounds of applause.

ALICE HUGHES.

The change in attitude toward the British royal family is plain to hear. By far the most popular member—in fact, the only popular member, is Queen Mary, the Mother Queen. The present King has not yet put himself across with newsreel audiences, who view him with challenging doubt. Queen Elizabeth is frankly not a popular figure. I never fail to hear women in the newsreel audience criticizing her clothes. "Too much fur about the elbows," and "She's got everything on but the kitchen stove" give a rough idea of how they feel about her. The little princesses have yet to make their mark. The ducal Windsors are favorites in two theaters. But not any longer in mine. Both he and she took a royal hissing and not a few titters when their wedding pictures were shown. "Just another idol smashed," I heard someone say. I can't imagine what people used to do to indicate their feelings before newsreel theaters became prevalent. Probably they wrote vox populi letters to newspapers.

• • • •

Never knew a time when more new magazines were a-borning. By September there are promised at least three new fashion publications, one baby and children magazine and two on the beauty business. In the last group is one imposing quarterly, based on the format of Fortune, to be priced at $1 the copy, and edited by Eleanor Choate Hill and Jean Spades, the former an advertising woman, the later, an artist.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Three editors who wear their gray-white hair in the fashionable mouve-blue tint, which makes them look far younger than their years, are Carmel Snow, of Harper's Bazaar; Ethel Holland Little, of Woman's Home Companion, and Wilhella Cushman, of Ladies' Home Journal . . . Sidney Fox is now enjoying the role of Katherine Locke in "Having Wonderful Time," and doing well at it, too. Nothing a movie star likes better, in order to bolster her belief in her own acting ability, than to get a part to play in the legitimate theater . . . I overheard Anita Loos telling someone that Jean Harlow had had inadequate medical attention. That she put her faith in a nonsurgical form of healing, but that an operation might have saved her. Meantime I find it too depressing to see newspaper trucks rattling about New York, hugely placarded with "Jean Harlow in Full Colors" . . . Mrs. Eddie Duchin, who was Marjorie Oelrichs, is looking forward to imminent motherhood . . . After lunching with Dawn Powell, the authoress, at the Brevoort outdoor cafe the other noon, I now order my lettuce salads as she does; heart of lettuce, shredded, with roquefort dressing. Too much of a nuisance to cut lettuce wtih a fork, and Emily Post won't let you use a knife.

This column appears Sunday and daily.

Bob Burns Says:

When a man wants to learn to drive a car, he goes down and takes lessons from some professional, but when he tries to teach his wife to drive, he loses patience with her because she can't catch on as quick as he did when he's made it so plain to her. I heard one of them husbands givin' his wife her first lesson in drivin' a car the other day.

He got her in the driver's seat and he said. "Now just turn the jigger over and pull on the hickey with your left hand and push down on the other little jimcrack with your right and then press down the do-dad with your foot and pull the thingamabob at the same time and when it starts, you push down on the do-funny with your left foot and yank the uptiddy back and then let up on the foot dingus and put your other foot on the hicky-madoddle and don't forget to push down on the hootenanny every time you move the whatyoumaycallit and you'll be all hunkydory,—see?"

'Beauty Is Truth'

We hear that certain postal officials are beside themselves in fits of temperament over the murals in their big and pretty building. These officials, our informant relates, make no pose as authorities on the arts, but having claim to at least a mild touch of esthetic sensibility are squirming in their swivel chairs and searching the reference books of their souls for the meaning of the murals.

They wonder what is the postal connection in that big painting that shows an Indian woman with a snake around her neck. The snake seems to squirm, and our informant has pondered on the effects it might have on some citizen who chances down the corridor in the abiding and rending aftermath of a jag.

The officials have long been in puzzlement over the meaning of the painting on the west wall of the Benjamin Franklin Station, it is related. This picture fairly smacks you in the face. The buxsomeness of the gal, the leanness of the man, the rural eloquence of it all are impressive and lingering. But the officials—our informant continues—have wondered what it has to do with the Postoffice. Our informant braved himself to ask one of the artists.

"It is art," the artist stated.

T. V. A. has created a new position, chief budget officer, and has promoted Paul W. Ager, its assistant comptroller, to fill it.

The Stamp Box

There are many stamp collectors in the Veterans' Administration. The number one collector in this family is the administrator of veterans' affairs, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines. Then his assistant, Col. George E. Ijams, is a collector, too. Both of these philatelists have excellent collections, especially in United States and covers. Another collector is Frederick R. Rice, in one of the units. He has served for two years as president of the Collectors Club, branch 5, Society of Philatelic Americans, and is one of the leaders in Washington philately.

* * * *

Daniel H. Reichgut, of the alcohol tax unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau, has one of the largest as well as the finest collections of first-day covers in Washington. All of the new issues from the world over are collected first day by him and there are many rare as well as superb covers in his collection. He belongs to the Collectors Club, branch 5, S. P. A.

* * * *

Harry A. Fox, of the coin room of the Treasury Department, a member of the Washington Philatelic Society, has one of the best general collections in the city. He has recently disposed of his large collections of United States and air mails but still continues to collect. His friends say he will soon have another United States collection underway. Among the excellent stamps in his collection are the superb Indian States stamps in practically complete arrangement.

Backs Stengle's Plan

Lodge 178, A. F. G. E., of Springfield, Mass., has approved President Stengle's stand with regard to the suspension of the seven lodges and has expressed its thanks to him for his efforts in behalf of the lodge.

Several days ago, this column asked some questions. Among these were: How many members do the A. F. G. E., the N. F. F. E., the U. F. W. A. and the U. C. S. E. really have? President Stengle writes us to say that his membership rosters never have been a secret and that anyone who desires the information may have it for the asking.

C. Wylie Allen, who comes to the FHA as savings and loan director, is a member of the Chicago Bar Association, the American Bar Association, the Illinois bar, the Indiana bar, the Executive Club of Chicago, Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity, Acacia Fraternity, National Sojourners and is a former member of the board of governors of the American Savings, Building and Loan Institute, Washington Chapter. He seems to be a joiner.

A drama of thudding hoofs, daring and skill was enacted last night in the Jamboree arena at the Monument Grounds at the big night show. At the left, Mrs. John Milliken presents the cup to Lieut. John Ramsey Pugh 3, whose Inclusive won the hunter class. In the center is Margaret Cotter on Rory and at the extreme right is Mrs. R. Williams, on Sister.

Brilliant feats by Fort Myer Cavalry troopers featured Washington's first open-air night horse show last night in the Jamboree Arena at the foot of the Monument. About 10,000 persons, including many Scouts, attended.

One serious accident marred the show. In the handicap jumping event, Capt. Kenneth G. Hoge's mount, Broomfield, knocked over a 4-foot wall jump and threw his rider to the ground. First the obstacle and then the horse toppled onto Hoge, fracturing his wrists and causing possible internal injuries.

Troop E opened the exhibition with a musical ride. Dressed in the vivid black, red and yellow costumes of Spanish vaqueros and carrying long spears tipped with red and white pennants, the riders wove intricate patterns of color as they wheeled back and forth across the field.

Popular with the audience was the rodeo ride, in which members of Troop F proved their ability to ride their long-suffering horses in every conceivable position. Blank cartridges and shouts of "Yip-pee!" provided appropriate sound effects.

Sponsored by the Inter-American Horse Show Association, the event will assist in financing the participation of some European team in the Inter-American Horse Show in October. It is expected the Irish team will be brought over.

An unusual event, restricted to riding-school hacks, opened the show. The horses were shown at a walk, trot and canter. Conformation did not enter into the judging.

Rob Roy, owned by the Potomac Riding Stable and ridden by Miss Maxine Farley, won first prize. Second was won by Lady Bee, of Our Riding Academy, ridden by Miss Martha Richardson; third, by Sister, Potomac Riding Stable, ridden by Mrs. R. Williams, and Colonel, Potomac Riding Stable, ridden by Miss Esther C. Dickson.

Ribbons in this class were awarded by Maj. Frank L. Whitaker, of Fort Myer.

In the handicap jumping, Inclusive, ridden by Lieut. John Pugh, placed first; Mully Grubble, ridden by Lieut. Charles M. Isely, second; Ranger, owned by Ralph Counselman and ridden by Miss Elizabeth Stieg, third, and Catherine Stone, owned by Roland Hartman and ridden by Arnold Lusby, fourth.

Mrs. John Millikan awarded the ribbons in Class II.

Ribbons in the open hunter class were awarded by Mrs. Arthur P. Fair to Sport Marvel, owned by U. S. Randle and ridden by Frost Anderson, first; Castellon, owned and ridden by Maj. Arthur P. Fair, second; Claus, owned by U. S. Randle and ridden by Robert Roby, third, and Randle's Pride, owned and ridden by U. S. Randle, fourth.

A "knockdown and out" jumping class followed the exhibition events. Ribbons were awarded to Applejack, owned and ridden by Fenton Fadely, first; Red Cloud, of the Fort Myer Horse Show Team, ridden by Capt. John L. Hines, second; Randle's Pride, owned and ridden by U. S. Randle, third, and Clipped Wings, of the Fort Myer team, ridden by Maj. Thayer, fourth.

Sport Marvel, ridden by Frost Anderson, placed first among the hunter hacks. Ribbons also went to Mully Grubble, ridden by Lieut. Iseley, second; Castellon, owned and ridden by Maj. Thayer, third, and Claus, owned by U. S. Randle and ridden by Robert Robey, fourth.

Mrs. James W. Barnett awarded the ribbons.

Fenton Fadely's Applejack, ridden by the owner, received the blue ribbon in the open jumping class. Other winners were Catherine Stone, owned by Roland Hartman and ridden by Arnold Lusby, second; Randle's Way, owned by U. S. Randle and ridden by Robert Roby, third, and Randle's Pride, owned and ridden by U. S. Randle, fourth.

The judges, Col. Jonathan Wainwright, commandant of Fort Myer, and District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, named Applejack the champion jumper, and Inclusive the reserve champion. Sport Marvel was chosen champion hunter, with Castellon as reserve champion.

Congressmen Ask Federal Loan to D. C.

Kennedy, King Take Up Fight Dropped by Commission.

By James D. Secrest.

Two contrary moves were inaugurated yesterday to save the District government from an impending financial impasse as municipal officials stated that the city will be unable to meet pay rolls on August 1 unless some relief legislation is enacted this month.

After the Commissioners had agreed to sidetrack Melvin C. Hazen's proposal that a joint resolution be drafted to enable the District to obtain emergency loans from the Treasury, leaders of the Senate and House District Committees decided to sponsor such legislation themselves.

Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Representative Kennedy, chairman of the revenue sub-committee of the House District Committee, discussed the grave fiscal crisis confronting the National Capital and agreed that joint resolution authorizing temporary Treasury advances offers the only hope for the District.

Kennedy said that he would wait until Monday before actually introducing the resolution to see if the Senate remains adamant in its refusal to take up the omnibus tax measure until the court reform bill is disposed of.

There is grave doubt even that the loan resolution will be given a brief right-of-way in the Senate once it passes the House. Senator King is hopeful, though, that Majority Leader Robinson and Senator Wheeler, leader of the court bill opposition, will agree to allow time for its approval as no debate is anticipated.

Meanwhile, George E. Allen, Commissioner, started an enthusiastic one-man lobby just outside the doors of the Senate chamber.

"I'm going to stay here until I have seen all the Senate leaders and explained the District's financial situation," he said. "We don't want a borrowing resolution unless there is no chance of getting the tax bill passed this month."

Allen said that Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who reported the tax bill, is agreeable to an intermission in the court bill debate for consideration of the District measure.

He hopes to confer with Majority Leader Robinson early next week.

Commissioner Hazen, who remained at the District Building, threatened to make a personal appeal to President Roosevelt if the Senate has not acted on the tax bill by August 1. He said the District heads in the meanwhile will try to impress upon the Senators the urgent need for action.

Hazen said the District heads hoped to delay any payless furloughs of municipal employes until September by spending obligated money, but other District officials were skeptical of the ability of the city government to operate that long on the dwindling remains of the $5,000,000 Federal contribution.

The Commissioners are already curtailing expenditures wherever possible. None of the capital improvements for which appropriations were made in the current supply bill will be started until the fiscal crisis is passed.

It is probable that even obligations that are falling due on construction done under last year's appropriations may not be met until some additional revenue is assured the District.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, veteran of 40-odd years in the District service, said that the National Capital has never in his knowledge faced as serious a financial crisis as it does today.

Besides the shortage of money, the District government is up against an increasingly difficult administrative problem.

Traditionally, and under the provisions of law, the Commissioners fix the realty and personal property tax rate early in July. Already confronted with conflicting wishes of the House and Senate as to the realty rate, the District heads are afraid to set any rate until they know what form the tax measure will take finally.

Motorcyclist Is Year's 57th Traffic Victim

Bernard Eaton, 23, Dies; Driver Held in $1,000 Bail for Mishap.

Bernard Eaton, 23, of Clinton, Md., died yesterday noon in Gallinger Hospital, Washington's fifty-seventh traffic victim of the year.

Eaton, according to police, was operating a motorcycle at the intersection of Pennsylvania avenue and Fifth street southeast, when he was struck by a car operated, police said, by Noah Lee Weakley, 27, of 1510 Trinidad avenue northeast. Evelyn Greene, 22, of Branchville, Md., also on the motorcycle, suffered minor injuries.

Weakley, arrested and charged with leaving after colliding, was later released on $1,000 bond.

A coroner's jury yesterday held Tannar F. Slaughter, 29, colored, of Charlottesville, Va., responsible in the traffic death of Arthur J. Dunning, 27, of 308 Thirteenth street southeast, on Thursday. Slaughter was held for Police Court for trial under the negligent homicide act.

Ella J. Mulligan, 57, of 2610 K street, had both arms broken when struck by an auto, police said, operated by Green W. Hackworth, 57, of 3714 Morrison street. The accident occurred at Pennsylvania avenue and Twenty-sixth street. She was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Estella Duke, 55, colored, of 1406 Swann street northwest, was struck by a car operated by John B. Logan, 20, of 3619 Quesada street northwest, near E street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, police said. She was treated at Emergency Hospital for concussions and possible fractured skull.

Search for Washington Youth Is Renewed As His Mother Lies Near Death in Hospital

The boy disappeared from his Washington home, at 467 I street northwest, last October soon after his mother was married to Charles Stephens, a bricklayer.

"If the police can find him, I will pay his way back and make a good home for him. I think we would all be happier then," Stephens said last night.

Harvey O'Connor, friend and neighbor, likewise volunteered money to pay any expenses involved in bringing the boy to Washington. "I have known them for a long time, and I know that the sight of John would make her well. She wouldn't be in the hospital today if he had not gone away."

Hspital physicians expressed doubt the mother could live through the night. She was suffering, they said, from a complication of diseases and had been in the hospital for several weeks.

Stephens said he and his wife did not report disappearance of the boy last October because they believed he had gone to live with his father, Jack Harrison, of Wilmington, N. C., or with his grandfather, John Harrison.

The grandfather, O'Connor said, may be living "anywhere from Georgia up as far as New Jersey. They're a family of tourists—or gypsies, you might call them. I think it will take the State police to find them.

"Lillian lived with them a while. She worked in the 5-and-10 cent store here in Washington," he said.

Mrs. Stephens, who lived in Salisbury, Md., before her marriage, is also the mother of a young daughter.

Congress Asked To Retire Putnam

Representative Kent E. Keller (Democrat), Illinois, yesterday asked Congress to authorize the retirement of Dr. Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress, with three-fourths pay. Dr. Putnam has been librarian since 1899, when he left his position as librarian at the Boston Public Library.

Representative Keller last year sponsored a similar bill, but the bill was attacked by the late Representative Zioncheck and defeated.

Born in New York City in 1861, Putnam is a graduate of Harvard. A member of the bar of Minnesota and Massachusetts, he also holds membership in the Library Association, of which he is a past president; the Harvard Club, Cosmos Club, Chevy Chase Country Club and National Press Club.

Phone Rate Drop Predicted as New Inquiry Impends

A substantial decrease in local telephone rates was predicted at the District Building yesterday when the Public Utilities Commission ordered an investigation of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. revenues.

The inquiry has been annual since 1934, when Washingtonians received refunds of $1,080,000. The refunds resulted from a case in District Court which set the company's rate of return at 6 per cent.

Last year a rate decrease of $253,100 was ordered and in 1935 the reduction totaled $346,900. The P. U. C. investigation is in the form of an annual "checkup" to determine revenue amounts over and above the allowed 6 per cent return rate, according to Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission.

Boys Club House Building to Begin

Construction will begin Tuesday on the new $200,000 clubhouse for the Boys Club of Washington, Inc. Ground-breaking ceremonies will begin at 10 a. m., with a large number of District officials present. The structure will be located at Seventeenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast. The new building will house a 75-foot swimming pool, large gymnasium, game rooms, health clinic and projection room. The new building will be the largest and most complete club for boys in the city.

Frank R. Jelleff, president of the club for 17 years, will officiate at the ground-breaking ceremonies.

Arraignments For Gambling Set for Monday

124 Defendants to Enter Pleas on Gaming and Conspiracy Counts.

In the first step of the prosecution of 124 persons—five of them policemen—for either gambling law violations or conspiracy to violate the gaming laws of the District, arraignment of all those indicted will be held in District Court Monday, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett declared yesterday.

Only eight of the defendants have not been arrested, and they were expected to put in their appearance in time for a hearing before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue. At that time, they will be expected to enter a plea.

In one indictment, that in which the policemen were named, 32 persons were charged with conspiring to violate the gaming laws. Chief among them was Abe Plisco, better known as Dietz, who was alleged head of an information service that supplied racetrack information to numerous spots in the District.

Police, headed by a squad of "untouchables," made a total of 85 raids.

Attaches of the United States Attorney's office yesterday professed to have no idea of how many, if any, of those indicted would plead guilty. They said the pleas would be merely entered on the docket and would not be acted upon probably until the fall, when court convenes.

Heads of Traffic Bureau, Police School Changed

Three important changes among police officers were announced yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Lieut. John Fondall will be switched from the First Precinct to become head of the Traffic Bureau. He is one of the expert marksmen of the force and an instructor in the Police School.

Lieut. Walter H. Thomas, until yesterday head of the Police School, will be transferred to the First Precinct at his own request. He is next in line among the lieutenants for promotion to captaincy when such a spot is vacant.

Lieut. Walter Storm will become head of the Police School. He came from the Sixth Precinct to the Traffic Bureau as an acting lieutenant, and received his full rank last August. He got the highest marks of any lieutenant taking the police examination.

Invalid Grocer's Wife Hangs Self

The body of Mrs. Sarah Popluder, 55, was found hanging by a clothesline from a transom in the rooms in which she and her invalid husband lived at the rear of their grocery store at Georgia avenue and Harvard street.

A certificate of suicide was issued by Coronor A. Magruder MacDonald. Mrs. Popluder was said to have been in ill health and despondent for the last year. The body was discovered by police and members of an Emergency Hospital ambulance crew, summoned when a neighbor heard the shouts of the husband, alarmed at his wife's failure to appear.

Dancing or Just Resting—It's All the Same When the Sun Goes Down

Heat drove 2,000 dance fans and spectators to the parking space at McKinley Langley Community Center. (Left) Sentimental music was out of order as demands went up for "swing" suitable for trucking and the Susie Q. The harder they danced the cooler they claimed to be, although part of the secret was a breeze that came up arly in the evening. Only 531 showed up at the nearby swimming pool. (Lower center) Harvey Black, Commodore Hotel, and Mary Inglehart, 2107 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, said the grass at Capital Plaza was nice and cool, if you kept away from shrubbery that would block the breeze. (Upper center) Nancy Collins, 10, and Juanita Wanderone, 13, found the Plaza better than cool drinks or bath tubs. Juanita tried crawling into the refrigerator earlier but "couldn't quite make it." (Right) Bunny Knupp, 740 Fifth street northwest, and Silvio Colie, 1300 Emerson street northeast, were among the leaders of the "Swing" lobby at McKinley-Langley Comunity Center. They find dancing cools you off, and "even if it didn't it's better to melt outside than inside."

A Gay Musical Wins Plaudits At the Earle

'Singing Marine' Hailed as an Ideal Summer Entertainment.

"THE SINGING MARINE." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Delmar Daves, with music and lyrics by Warren and Dubin and dances directed by Busby Berkeley, starring Dick Powell, with Lee Dixon, Jane Darwell, George "Doc" Rockwell, Marcia Ralston, Veda Ann Berg, Berton Churchill, Doris Weston, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Jane Wyman, Eddie Acuff, Robert Barrat and Pierre Watkin. Directed by Ray Enright. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris, at the Earle Theater.

Those ol' devil-dogs, the Marines, turn out to be a flock of first-class canaries in "The Singing Marine." The soldiers of the sea sound their tenors, barytones and basses with great effect in the new "Song of the Marines" and then swing into the famed "From the Halls of Montezuma."

Music and more music gives the picture a conquering quality. It abounds with singable, whistlable, hummable tunes, with wordage as gay as the melodies are feathery.

Dick Powell, having polished off Annapolis and West Point, musically, brings his best efforts toward glorifying the Marines. Whether you are a Powell-ite or not, you are going to like the fellow and give him credit for a fine, neatly turned performance, comic and romantic in the proper proportions.

Is Hot-Weather Diversion.

Neither scenario writer nor director has exuded undue perspiration over story or sequences, which both run along in a pleasant, synthetic way, coming under the head of celluloid trivia of the dog-days. In fact, there are a few moments of graceless and tasteless comedy, only subdued by the skill of the performers.

Thus to song writers Harry Warren and Al Dubin and a gay and artful cast, all the credit for the sound entertainment quality and general joyousness of "The Singing Marine."

As a bashful youth from Arkansas, but with a gift for harmony, Dick Powell enters the Marine Corps. He is impressed into service as a one-man orchestra for wienie parties on the beach, the good idea being that a bit of romantic music will often change a hesitating "No" into a "Yes." From there it is only a step to competition in one of Maj. Bowes' Amateur Hours (although Maj. Bowes is not definitely mentioned) and an immediate national hit. But a Marine must go when orders call, and orders call for transfer to Shanghai, making for no end of picturesque film situations.

If Dick Powell is the star of "The Singing Marine," Hugh Herbert is its major planet. If it weren't for the funning around of H. Herbert, the picture might flatten out like a bride's pancake. Hugh is funny every minute, but he practically rolled onlookers out of their seats in his impersonation of his own sister.

Newcomers Score Hits.

Lee Dixon, one of the most promising young men on the West Coast, not only contributed an excellent tap dance, but plenty of light comedy. If you should ask us, he has more of the old S. A. than nine out of ten of the current leading men. Allen Jenkins, as a double-berled sergeant, is plenty good, too, while our old vaudeville pet, "Doc" Rockwell, horns in briefly as a master of ceremonies.

Doris Weston, of the 1937 crop of baby film stars, proves not only to be a little sweetie but a smart singer.

Just what future there is in the movies for a harmonica player is anybody's guess. But Larry Adler is the Garbo of harmonica players. His two numbers were, to this reviewer, the wonder spots of the picture. He creates not only melody but a mood, a mood worthy of a more subtle setting than it received.

For the diamond stars among a bunch of songs that all deserve gold stars, may we nominate "Cause My Baby Says It's So," "The Lady Who Couldn't Be Kissed" and "I Know Now."

"The Singing Marine" upholds the Marine tradition of being the topsest in a new way, musically You's better see it—we mean, hear it.

The Stage Bill.

The Four Kraddocks, clad as French sailors, add the gifts of comedy and a flavor of adagio dancing to their essential acrobatics. They have never appeared in Washington before and are clever. On the other hand (rather foot) are the Three Samuels and Harriet Hayes, who have been in Washington no end of times, but are always delightful to watch as expert dance-comedy exponents.

Tommy Martin should be billed as the "magician with a manner." He makes cards and cigarettes say "Uncle" and he lays an egg — originally and to the tune of enthusiastic applause. Ross, Pierre and Schuster, radio kidders, we-ell, their carryings-on were liked by the audience—partly.

We shall always remember them as the trio that had the effrontery to dedicate a too-steaming version of the "St. Louis Blues" to the Boy Scouts.

Trans-Lux

The news cameras are turning up so many truths that put fiction to shame that the present-day world takes on a bizarre glamour one never dreamed of ten years ago. On the new Trans-Lux program the lens draws into close-up a Washington housewife who took under her maternal guidance five lonely baby skunks, who behave like pet mice; a blindman in the West who repairs delicate watches and a miracle woman in Cuba who heals by prayer and faith.

Two unusual travel shots—and of the good ones there can never be enough for this reviewer—certainly incite the desire to "go places;" a camera cruise through the Suez Canal, with glimpses of Port Said, Malta and Gibraltar, and "Skii-Thrill in Norway," one of the best sports reels ever made.

Top news events: President Roosevelt paying official respects to the Boy Scouts' Jamboree, with Uncle Dan Beard occupying a seat of honor in the Presidential car; South Sea coral reefs giving some idea of the landing field where the Earhart plane went down; the South Chicago Memorial Day strike clash (held over from last week by request) and the All-Star game that packed 'em in at Griffith Stadium.

As for life in its lighter moments, the Trans-Lux presents Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Rogers and Mr. and Mrs. Gene Raymond taking the Honolulu honeymoon route—and sports flashes.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Between Two Women,' at Capitol, Vivid Romance; 'Day at the Races,' a Howling Farce, at the Palace

Triangle Love Story Has Hospital Background and Surgery Motif.

"BETWEEN TWO WOMEN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Erich Von Stroheim, adapted to the screen by Frederick Stephani and Marion Parsonnet, featuring Franchot Tone, Maureen O'Sullivan and Virginia Bruce, with Leonard Penn, Cliff Edwards, Janet Beecher, Charles Grapewin, Helen Troy, Grace Ford, June Clayworth, Edward Norris, Anthony Nace and Hugh Marlowe. Directed by George B. Seitz. Reviewed Sunday midnight, July 4, at Loew's Capitol Theater.

As has been suggested in earlier columns, there are strong analogies to be drawn between this subject and both "Men in White" and "Green Light." It is not, however, in any sense a carbon copy of either of its predecessors in the same category of "hospital films."

"Between Two Women," primarily, is precisely what its title implies—a young interne's problem of finding himself in the face of the love of two lovely young women, one the best nurse in the General Hospital of a big city; the other a pampered and thoroughly spoiled daughter of great wealth, who comes to the hospital for an emergency operation, which Allan Meighan performs without waiting for consent either of hospital authorities or the young woman's family, thus saving her life.

BELL.

From this daily association between doctor and patient, there springs up an attachment that is mistaken for love. They are married with the understanding that Meighan will supply the necessities of life and his bride the luxuries—so harmonizing the vast difference in their financial resources. But the scheme will not work.

Plan Is Failure.

Inured to a purposeless and extravagant mode of living, Patricia Sloan soon discovers that the demands made upon a surgeon's time interfere tremendously with her social plans. To humor his wife, Allan surrenders more and more to her demand that he attend late parties, gay balls and lively night spots. In doing so, he misses one of his greatest opportunities at the hospital where he is a member of the staff. He also bungles an operation that might have been successfully performed had he been on duty instead of on a lark.

All of this time, the hospital's chief surgeon and Claire Donohue, married to a drunken husband who has lost his grip on life, do their utmost to steady their friend, who promises to become one of the world's great operating surgeons. The climax is reached when his wife and Tony Woolcott, a subordinate surgeon, are brought in horribly injured in the wreck of the train upon which they were eloping to Europe, without benefit of divorce. Meighan performs an intricate and miraculously successful operation on his unsuspected rival, while his wife is being ministered to by another surgeon in another ward. From this situation springs the play's tensely dramatic and highly romantic denouement that definitely dissolves the Meighan-Sloan mesalliance and sends the young doctor back to Donohue at the hospital, her husband having been killed in a street accident.

Is Excellently Cast.

Such, briefly, is the story of the play. It is embellished with bits of enlivenment and a considerable change of scene from the drab monotony of the great hospital, but contains no sustained vein of comedy. The hospital atmosphere is caught and sustained with the same skill that was so manifest in "Men in White." The piece is exceedingly well acted.

Franchot Tone, who earned his present assignment as a reward for his work in "They Gave Him a Gun," plays the role of Meighan, the rising young surgeon, with a fine change of pace. He has achieved the happy faculty of being most expressive in the scenes in which he displays the greatest repression—like Ronald Colman or Paul Muni, Maureen O'Sullivan is cast as Nurse Donohue and plays the part with understanding and charm. Virginia Bruce has a role perfectly fitted to her talents in Patricia Sloan, the conscienceless young millionairess. It is not unlike the show girl she impersonated so well in "The Great Ziegfeld."

Others in the cast who should be singled out for individual acclaim include Leonard Penn, the rich young interne, who buys his way out of difficulties and into too much time off from his duties, and is the "threat" in the triangular love affair; Charles Grapewin, Cliff Edwards and the always reliable Janet Beecher, as superintendent of nurses.

Red Clicks Again.

Red Skelton returns to the Capitol stage this week to head a vaudeville revue with his genial banter, a dash of magic, a few imitations and a final "bit" with the Five Maxellos, upside down acrobats and gymnasts.

Red also serves as master of ceremonies and opens the bill with Al Gordon's Racketeers, a troupe of dogs cleverly trained to disobey their master's instructions. They are followed by the Stanley Twins in their precision "Shadow Dance;" Raymond Baird, who does remarkable things on saxophones, even playing two at one time; Ruthie Barnes, tap dancer extraordinary, and Dolly Dawn, a plump songstress with a pleasant mezzo voice who ran out of numbers yesterday afternoon she was that heartily encored. Miss Dawn seems able to do equal justice to both ballads and "hot" swing numbers.

The orchestra, under Phil Lampkin, is moved to the stage this week to provide background for the revue. The Fox Movietone news augments a feature that reflects a high order of merit in writing, production, direction and cast.

Plays Role of Screen Detective

In "Super Sleuth," the new camera drama opening on the screen at RKO-Keith's today, the corpulent Mr. Jack Okie, whose latest likeness appears above, is cast as an infallible motion-picture detective—until faced with a real murder in actual life. Without a script to work from, that is something else again. The foremost feminine role is portrayed by the charming Ann Sothern.

Marx Brothers Are Riot of Inspired Lunacy in Latest Comedy.

"A DAY AT THE RACES." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of an original story by Robert Pirosh and George Seaton, adapted to the screen by the authors and George Oppenheimer, starring the Marx Brothers, with Allan Jones, Maureen O'Sullivan, Margaret Dumont, Leonard Ceeley, Douglas Dumbrille, Esther Muir, Sigmund Rumann, Robert Middleman, Vivien Fay and Ivie Anderson and her Crinoline Choir. Directed by Sam Wood. Previewed Tuesday, July 6. At the Palace.

If you are deliberately nursing an ingrown grouch; if laughter affects your weak heart, or if your buttons are not all sewed on tight with heavy waxed thread, don't go to see this one!

"A Day at the Races," with the Marx Brothers at the top of their form as the most explosively comic lunatics outside of asylum walls, is the most tempestuous, the most diversified and the most continuously hilarious screen comedy that has come along in the recent history of the cinema. Needless to say, it doesn't make sense, despite a thread of "plot" that strings its ridiculous sequences together in an attempt to salvage a bankrupt sanitarium and win a fabulously rich race.

As all comedies of this type must be, "A Day at the Races" is divided into a succession of sequences, each of which might be a tabloid comedy by itself. There are, for example, the tip-selling incident between Groucho and Chico Marx; the recurrent scenes with the sheriff, intent on turning the health resort over to his pals, the swindlers, and confiscating Gil's one-horse stable for nonpayment of feed bills; the telephone sequence in the sanitarium office; the examination scene in the operating room of the sanitarium; the preparation for the race, and finally the running of that stupendous classic, with Harpo as one of the most resourceful jockeys the tracks have ever seen—out he wins!

All of these integral parts of the story development are convulsingly funny, if you are not averse to sheer foolishness on the screen, but it seemed to me that the tip-selling bit, the physical examination scene and the frenzied business that precedes the running of the great steeplechase were a little more inspired than the rest.

Groucho Marx is cast as Dr. Hugo Hackenbush, a horse doctor imported from Florida to take complete charge of the northern health building institution that is about to be snatched from the control of its youthful owner, Judy. The role of the pillster, who is more valuable around the paddock than he is in a clinic, affords this versatile comic unlimited scope for his insane antics. Chico appears as a helpful attache of the sanitarium and Harpo as a wordless helpmeet whose pantomime is something at which to marvel. All three are in constant jeopardy from the persistently pursuing sheriff. Chico plays the piano and Harpo the harp, under slightly hectic and destructive conditions.

Maureen O'Sullivan is Judy and Allan Jones' "heart interest," and Margaret Dumont continues in her familiar role of foil for most of Groucho's rough stuff in the role of the rich Mrs. Upjohn, whose fortune is sought to pull Judy out of the fire. Douglas Dumbrille appears again as the "heavy," whose shrewd schemes come to naught.

To relieve the strain of constant laughter, musical numbers are introduced from time to time, through the medium of a water carnival, in which Allan Jones sings "Blue Venetian Waters," and a barnyard "swing spiritual," led by Harpo and participated in by Ivie Anderson and her Crinoline Choir of Negro artists. This "All God's Chillun Got Rythm" number is one of the most pretentious in the picture. Jones also sings "Tomorrow Is Another Day" in his fine tenor and then there is "A Message from the Man in the Moon." Vivien Fay executes an exquisite ballet number in the carnival scene.

By no means slighted in productional values, as comedies of this sort so often are. "A Day at the Races" has been tricked out in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's most opulent manner and bespeaks great care in both investiture and direction. It dashes along at a brisk pace from which there is never any recession. Incidentally, the race horse in the film is a pretty elegant actor on his own account, responding to impulses of startling unexpectedness whenever Mr. Dumbrille is around.

A FitzPatrick Traveltalk, "Colorful Bombay:" a Pete Smith short-reel, "The Grand Bounce"—which has to do with the peculiarity of certain types of bank checks—and "Events of the Day" are the supplementary attractions with a feature that is so uniformly funny that many of the "gags" were lost yesterday afternoon in the tumult raised by the audience in laughing at the last one. See this and have yourself a time!

The reason you have read so few interviews with Fred Astaire is he thinks he talks better with his feet One word description of Loretta Young: Amouresthetic. Wonder why Lily Pons has two grand pianos in her living room.

The corner of Sunset and Gower has stolen Hollywood and Cahuenga's title, "The Old Water-n' Hole." It is now the official hangout of screen cowboys—a last frontier of the Old West. Don't get the idea that the punchers lounging there in their ten-gallon hats, high-heeled boots and gaudy vests, are "drugstore cowboys;" nine out of ten are weather-beaten oldtimers who spent their best years riding the range with now vanished herds. They drifted here because only the screen offers their kind of work now. A sociable bunch among themselves, they seem to hold the rest of Hollywood in some contempt and I often wonder what they think as they watch the pomp of Filmland's passing parade.

I have taken a few slaps at Martha Raye so I guess it is only fair to hand her a bouquet when one is deserved. The other day I watched her take two dangerous falls in a scene despite the director's plea that she should give way to a double. Just before the last take, she squelched his arguments by saying, "If you want the scene in this picture, I'll take the risk. I don't want a kid hurt who can't afford it, because studios forget such kids too easily."

Whenever I can steal the time I always slip over to the Columbia Broadcasting studios and watch Ken Murray rehearsing his program. It is better than going to the circus, for the whole cast clowns from beginning to end. Yesterday, Ken tried out a new gag on the troupe and (by prearrangement, I suppose) they listened in frozen silence.

"Come on, fellows," Murray pleaded in a hurt voice, "Even a good healthy hiss would be better than this dead quiet."

Watched Director Leo McCarey shooting today and noticed two sets of twins—small dark-haired boys and tiny blonde girls—waiting on the sidelines for their call. I didn't give them another thought until cameras started turning and I discovered that the story called for only one boy and one girl. Leo soothed my throbbing curiosity by explaining that small children are allowed to work only two hours per day on a movie set and he was alternating these kids in order to finish his picture on schedule. "Figured identical twins would be the perfect doubles," he said.

Nero Wolfe Is Nimble Sleuth In New Drama

Walter Connolly Assumes Leading Role in Crime Play at the Met.

"THE LEAGUE OF FRIGHTENED MEN." Columbia Pictures filmization of a Nero Wolfe story by Rex Stout, adapted to the screen by Eugene Solow and Gut Endore, featuring Walter Connolly, with Lionel Stander, Eduardo Ciannelli, Irene Hervey, Victor Killian, Nana Bryant, Allen Brook, Walter Kingsford, Leonard Mudie and Rafaela Ottiano. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Reviewed Friday evening by Sally Stroud, at the Metropolitan Theater.

Nero Wolfe, Rex Stout's orchid-growing, chocolate-drinking detective, comes to life on the screen again in a cunningly wrought tale about a bunch of panicky men who fear murder from a former classmate.

It all started at Harvard, when a too severe hazing brought life-long injury to a young foreigner. There were 13 in the group originally and when their number began to be depleted in a strange manner, their guilty consciences caused them to suspect Paul Chapin, their hazing victim.

Because Paul Chapin is played by Eduardo Cianelli, the unforgettable grimacer of "Winterset," you, too, will point the finger at him. That Nero Wolfe (this time played by Walter Connolly) is able to pin the guilt on another member of the group is a credit to his sleuthing, it would seem. More remarkable it is that Mr. Wolfe is able to do anything at all with the interruptions, interpolations and insanities of his assistant, one Archie Goodwin, who in real life is frogtoned Lionel Stander.

Some of the situations are transparent to the point of juvenilia, but at times Mr. Wolfe almost goes beyond his debonair fellow sleuth, William Powell, who thin-manned himself to fame. The audience seemed to take to Mr. Connolly, who is rotund, mellow, an all-round genial fellow.

Lavish Auxiliaries.

Assorted and lavish are the supplementaries, the best of which would seem to be a Looney Tune cartoon with Porky, the stuttering pig, in full blossom. The foreword announces there is a definite intention to tie up the events with current happenings. Since the plot concerns the building of a couple of buildings, realtors might please note.

Estelle Taylor strives valiantly, with much gesticulating and straining of vocal cords, to make "Rhythm Round-up" a razz-a-matazz comedy. It is a musical comedy bit of play-acting about the Old West, which you might enjoy by reason of the really good orchestra which performs excellently.

Edgar ("Slow-burn") Kennedy turns in a neat job in another of his silly and amusing little comedies. This time it is called "Locks and Bonds" and concerns his discomfiture upon papering his den with bonds which later seemed about to pay off. If the Kennedy antics and mugging amuse you, his dog imitations will probably leave you weak from laughing.

Among the good newsreel shots are some of the Ryder Cup contestants.

Too much criticism has resulted from the frowning photos of him . . . His advisers also suggested that he call a press interview and express his good will toward F. D. R. "You still love him, don't you?" Lewis was asked. "Yes," he answered, "with limitations" . . . "Well," he was told, "in the interview stress the love—and not the limitations!"

Columbia.

Brushwood Gulch was probably a lusty and colorful town in the latter days of the frontier. But in their presentation of life in the West, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are little concerned with comedy derived from locale, continue to ignore situations, subtlety of dialogue or pantomime as sources of humor. Their old formula of unrelieved slapstick, pounding, punching and gouging, carries them through to the end.

With an imitation of Claudette Colbert's famous hitch-hiking trick, Stan Laurel stops the show early in its beginnings and it remains in that state for a considerable length of time.

Between sessions of skull cracking, neck twisting, and punches in the nose, a deed to a gold mine flies back and forth only to be lost in a series of furniture smashing scenes.

Somehow the deed to the gold mine and Laurel and Hardy survive, and "Way Out West" swings to a happy close with a couple of sadistic back slaps by Oliver Hardy.

There are some excellent newsreel shots of Amelia Earhart and her world flight, and of Bing Crosby personally opening his new race track.

Henry Cotton Plays Great Golf in Gale to Win British Open Title

FIST FIGHTING MARKS YANKS' 16-2 WIN OVER NATS

Sports | The Washington Post | Sports

* X. WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JULY 10, 1937 13

U. S. Stars Far Behind At the End

Nelson Leads Yankees by Taking Fifth; Other Americans Follow.

By Scotty Reston,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Carnoustie, Scotland, July 9. — Tall Henry Cotton, sloughing his way through as wild a storm as ever blew in off the Irish coast, came from behind today to win the British Open golf championship with a 72-hole score of 290.

Favored to win over one of the greatest fields ever assembled, the solemn Briton toured Carnoustie's vast rain-sodden distances in 73—71—144, only 3 over par, on his last two rounds to overtake his countryman, Reginald Whitcombe, and leave most of the Americans well to the rear.

Striding along in a brilliant red sweater under a tremendous yellow and brown umbrella, Cotton gave one of the greatest exhibitions of chipping ever seen in a major championship to pass Whitcombe, who took a shaky 76 on his last round and finished in second place with 292.

It is likely that Britain, which never has taken too warmly to the dour champion who first won the crown in 1934, finally will lionize him now, for his victory was not an individual accomplishment, but rather an exoneration of British golf, which had suffered a sad blow in losing the Ryder Cup again to the United States.

But the story was Cotton's almost from the start of the afternoon round. Reg. Whitcombe, leading his brother by two shots and Cotton by three at that point, started off in the midst of a downpour. He was steady enough for five holes, but then began to fade. He had slipped on his drive at the sixth, hitting the ball only 50 yards and taken a 6 before Cotton teed off.

Whitcomb, playing through a downpour all the way, was out in 39 when Cotton started, and Cotton started well. He got his 4 at the first and, at the second, stuck his approach in the middle of a puddle 60 feet from the pin.

Just a Little Luck.

He began looking for a place dry enough to putt from. When he finally found it, he studied the putt for a long time, then marched up and swished it through the water into the cup. There was an element of luck in this one and that seemed all Cotton needed.

He raced over the next three holes in par. At the sixth he thumped two great wood shots to the edge of the green, 521 yards away, then chipped dead to the hole and got his birdie 4. He lost a stroke at the seventh when his second skidded over and he took a 5, but he was out in 35, and at that point had picked up the three strokes he was behind and gone one ahead.

Certainly there was no doubt of Britain's supremacy on this final day. Even Charley Lacey, the big, blond Long Island professional who now is an American citizen and placed third, a shot behind Reg Whitcombe, learned his golf in England before going to the United States 12 years ago.

The first born-and-bred American in the field was Byron Nelson, slim ex-Texan, who is pro at Reading, Pa. Nelson finished fifth, six shots behind Cotton at 296.

In fourth place, with 294, was Charles Whitcombe, captain of the British Ryder Cuppers and older brother of Reggie, who looked as if he might make a family battle of it until Cotton, four strokes behind the leader at the start today and still three behind after 54 holes, withstood the worst part of the storm and came home with a crowd of 10,000 at his heels to take first prize.

One shot back of Nelson came Ed Dudley, who stood on one foot atop the field at the end of the first day and was only two shots away this morning. The geneial Georgian, who divides his working time between Philadelphia and Augusta, Ga., shot himself out of the running with a 78 on his third round and topped it with a 75 in the afternoon for a total of 297.

Alf Padgham, winner in 1936, was a stroke further away, tied with Arthur Lacey, brother of Charles and a member of the British Ryder Cup squad, and Bill Laidlaw, Cotton's assistant from Hertfordshire.

Smith Shoots 299.

Horton Smith, killing his chances on the morning round with a 79 and then rallying to a great 72 through the afternoon's storm, finished with 299.

Ralph Guldahl, the American Open champion who had 74-77—151, and Sam Snead, the usually straight-hitting youngster who had troubles with his driver and took 75-76—151, both ended with totals of 300. That was 19 strokes more than Guldahl had used up in winning the United States crown.

Meanwhile, Reggie had dropped strokes at the tenth and twelfth and finished with an inward 37 for a 76.

All Cotton needed to win after his 35 was a 37. He knew this when he went to the tenth tee and so did everybody in this section of Scotland, who were fast closing in on him. Furthermore the rain was lashing off the North Sea and even his umbrella and red-hot sweater weren't keeping him very dry.

He got away magnificently, playing the tough "South America" hole in 4, getting his 4s at the next two, and banging a nice drive on the short thirteenth for a 3. Henry hit two splendid shots just short of the fourteenth green and chipped dead for a birdie 4, and at no time from then on did he look troubled.

After playing the one-shot sixteenth in 3, all he needed to win were two 5s. He played it safe, got a good 4 with another fine chip at the seventeenth and took no chances with Barry Burn at the eighteenth. He played his second short into the sand, but pitched on and got down in two putts for a 5.

Powell Hits Kuhel After Rough Play

Millies, Harris in Melee Before Combatants Are Separated.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, July 9.—Washington broke even in a twin bill with the Yankees this afternoon. The Nats lost a ball game and won a fight.

The fight—a rematch between Joe Kuhel and Jake Powell, last week's Griffith Stadium battlers—was infinitely more thrilling than the 16-2 ball game.

All of a sudden—in the sixth inning—the 4,000 ball fans in the stadium were transformed into a fight crowd. The Nats' Kuhel and the Yankees' Powell began swinging fists in a lively battle.

A moment before, Powell had been thrown out at first by Cecil Travis. The play wasn't even close. Kuhel, taking his foot from the bag, turned toward the Yankee outfielder who had knocked him down on a similar play last week in Washington, and tagged him mildly with his mitt.

Powell Charges Joe.

Powell crossed the bag, turned sharply and charged toward the Washington first baseman. Without bothering to take off his mitt, Kuhel met Powell with a two-fisted barage. By this time, however, Powell was fighting with the handicap of Catcher Walter Millies, of Washington, perched on his back.

Millies, who had followed the play down the first-base line, leaped on Powell during the first exchange of blows. Powell turned on his new tormentor and Kuhel continued to pummel the outfielder. Powell was gaining the upper hand in his private wrestling match with Millies when Manager Bucky Harris rudely yanked the Yankee away.

By that time both Nats and Yankees were at the scene in great numbers, as were the three umpires. Cooler heads stopped the battling and Umpire in Chief Hubbard banished both Kuhel and Powell from the game.

No Battle Scars.

Down in the dressing room after the game, neither player bore any marks of the battle. "That guy Powell must be crazy," said Kuhel. "I didn't do anything to him. I didn't even know he was charging Fireworks broke out again between players of the Washington and Yankee ball clubs. A feud that started here on Independence Day—when Jake Powell, Yankee outfielder, put the "rush act" on Kuhel while crossing first base—went into the second round at the Yankee stadium yesterday. At right, Kuhel can be seen reeling to the ground when Jake Powell socked him on the jaw after Kuhel shouldered him while he was crossing first. After that picture was made action came fast with reenforcements from both dugouts taking a prominent part. In photo at left, Catcher Millies is recovering after going down. Yank bat boy and Coach Fletcher are pushing Buddy Myer. Harris and Crosetti are in the thick of the fray with the bare-headed Powell. Umpire Dineen is busy trying to stop the fight.

Misses Moore, Clarke Advance to Net Finals

Defeat Unseeded Players, Anne Ellis and Elinor Finchel in Semifinals of District Women's Tennis Tourney; Play Set Sunday at 2 P. M.

By Bob Garrison.

Two unseeded players, Anne Ellis and Elinor Finckel, making strong bids for the District of Columbia Women's Singles championship, bowed out of the tournament yesterday on the sun-baked Columbia Country Club courts, falling semifinal victims of the second and fourth seeded players, Edith Clarke and Sara Moore.

The temperature was registering at 115 degrees on the clay courts as the two favorites swept through their matches with their ambitious unranked opponents.

Edith Clarke, attractive bronzed blonde, seeded No. 2, eliminated Elinor Finchel, petite school teacher, in straight sets cautionsly aiming her shots rather than concentrate on speed for fear of falling victim of Miss Finckel's strategy of allowing her oponent to err while attempting to smash her well-placed but soft strokes. The scores of the sets were 6—1, 6—0.

In the other semifinal match, Sara Moore, seeded No. 4, ousted Anne Ellis, who eliminated Mrs. Margaret Robinson, No. 1 player, in the quarterfinals, after a lengthy first set. Miss Ellis, semifinalist in the Grand National sectional tourney, who met elimination in that tournament, at the hands of the same Sara Moore, took a 3—0 lead in the first set before Miss Moore could catch her. Miss Moore finally won the set, 8—6, then romped home with an easy 6—0 finale.

In deference to the Leech Cup matches scheduled for today at the Army-Navy Country Club, the committee announced that the singles final will be played at 2 p. m. Sunday. Doubles matches, however, will be played today.

In second round doubles matches, yesterday, the team of Clarke-Robinson defeated Finckel-Fishburne, 6—0; 6—2; Grimes-Moore defeated Mitchell-Ellis, 3—6, 6—4, 6—1; and Ryan-Butler defeated Graham-McCullock, 6—3, 4—6, 6—2.

In other doubles matches played yesterday Mary Ryan and Marion Butler eliminated Misses Rixey and Conard, 6—2, 6—1, in a first round match. Margaret Graham and Edith McCullock defeated Christine Gawne and Margo Stratford, 7—5, 6—2.

In today's doubles matches, Robinson-Clarke play the Butler-Ryan team at 10 a. m. and the Grimes-Moore team meets Vest-Owens at 11 a. m.

Mrs. Pschiffely In Links Triumph

The shooting of Mrs. Douglas Pschiffely featured the final day's play in the ladies tournament at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Mrs. Pschiffely won both the low net and low gross honors with 166, but chose to accept the low net prize, and Dr. S. B. Muncaster presented her with the Muncaster Cup.

Benefiting by the choice was Mrs. R. C. Roney, whose second low gross of 169 thus earned her low gross honors. Mrs. S. W. Du Bois gained second low gross with a 175.

A special prize to players with a 20 or better handicap was awarded Mrs. Murphy.

Cardinals Win, 8-7, Over Reds On Late Rally

Five Runs in Eighth Turn Tide; Three Homers Feature Game.

St. Louis, July 9.—A five-run rally in the eighth, in which Brusie Ogrodowski's triple played a major role, gave the St. Louis Cardinals an 8-to-7 victory over Cincinnati today. Joe Medwick, Ernie Lombardi, Virgil Davis and Billy Myers hit homers, Medwick's being his eighteenth of the season.

League-Leading Cubs Bow to Pirates, 13-1

Led by Walloping Waner Brothers, Bucs Pound Out Great Victory Over Chicagoans; Joe Bowman Limits Foes to Seven Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 9.—The Pirates pounnded three Chicago Cub pitchers for 19 hits and a 13-to-1 victory today in their series opener today.

Led by the walloping Waner boys, Big and Little Poison, they clinched the game in the first inning with a two-run rally, and went on to climax their clouting with a nine-run spree on ten hits in the seventh.

Meantime, Joe Bowman, the former Philly "pop fly" pitcher, limited the league leading Cubs to seven hits, and shut them out until the ninth, when Billy Herman's triple and Bill Jurges' grounder to short accounted for the only Chicago run.

The older of the Waners, Paul, clouted a triple and three singles, driving in three runs. His brother had three singles. Everyone on the line-up hit safely at least once, and all but four of the ten who saw action collected a pair of safeties apiece.

Paul Waner's single and Al Todd's double drove in the two runs in the opening frame. In the third, two singles and Arky Vaughan's double added another. Thirteen batters came to the plate in the seventh. The first five singled to drive Clyde Shoun to the showers. Clay Bryant, next Cubs' pitcher, gave a single to Johnny Dickshot, consecutive doubles to pep Young and Bowman and a triple to Paul Waner before retiring the side with a total of nine runs. In the eighth, Gus Suhr's triple and Todd's single produced the final tally.

Giants Bow To Dodgers In Wild Tilt

Brooklyn Collects 20 Hits, Giants Make Five Errors in Game.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, July 9.—The Dodgers climbed aboard the pitching of Hal Schumacher, Harry Gumbert and Tom Baker for 20 hits and a 15 to 2 victory over the New York Giants in their current series opener.

While the 31-year-old rookie, Luke Hamlin, handcuffed the Giants with five hits—one of them a homer by Johnny McCarthy in the ninth—the Dodgers, with the aid of five opposition errors as well as their own clouting, clinched the game with four runs in the second inning and breezed in with the decision.

Babe Phelps, with a triple, double and two singles, and Joe Stripp, with three singles that drove in four runs, paced the Dodger attack. Every player who started the game hit safely at least once, driving Schumacher to cover in the second, adding three more runs in the third, and climaxing their attack with six in the seventh.

A's Beaten By Red Sox In 12 Innings

Bow 12-11 as Chapman Triples and Cronin Doubles in 12th.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 9.—The Athletics and Boston Red Sox played nearly four hours today to reach a 12-inning decision of 12 to 11 for the Red Sox. The struggle was the first clash of a five-game series.

Behind 8 runs to 4 in the ninth as a result of a 6-run Mack rally in the eighth, Boston tied the score. They tabbed 3 more in the tenth, only to have the Athletics tie the score with 3 in the home half of the inning.

After a scoreless eleventh, the Red Sox won out on Ben Chapman's triple and a double by Joe Cronin, the latter's fourth hit. Lou Finney, with five hits, including a triple and two doubles, led the bombardment that netted the Mackmen 19 hits. The visitors made 17.

Dayton Polo Player Dies From Injuries

Mineola, N. Y., July 9 (AP).—Injuries suffered yesterday while playing polo at the Meadow Brook Club proved fatal today to Howell Howard, 39-year-old five-goal player from Dayton, Ohio.

Howard, treasurer of a chain of paper companies headed by his father, Maxwell Howard, suffered a fractured skull and other severe injuries when he was thrown from his pony while riding at No. 2 with Gerald Dempsey's Narragansett team.

While leaning over in an attempt to get a better shot at a bouncing ball, Howard's pony suddenly crossed his forelegs and went down. Howard's head hit the ground and the pony rolled over him. He never fully regained consciousness and died shortly after noon today.

Howard had been playing polo for nearly 20 years and competed in nearly every section of the world. Although he played merely as a pastime, his ability was widely known throughout polo circles and the Middle West. His father is the owner of a stable of race horses, trained by Earl Sande.

Young Howard was married and had four children. Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WINTER SPORT, $32.70, $13.60, $6.60; BRISTLE, $7.00, $4.00; LORD DALTON, $3.10.

WINTER SPORT, following along within close pursuit of the early pace, responded to pressure and fighting it out with BRISTLE all through the stretch run, outlasted the latter at the end. BRISTLE was prominently placed the entire trip and fought it out willingly to the end. LORD DALTON dropped back immediately after the start, moved up gradually when leaving the backstretch and finished going gamely.

DAILY DOUBLE, FIRST AND SECOND RACES, PAID $146.60.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:36. Winner, E. A. Reilly's br. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEDICATION, $6.70, $4.60, $3.00; FOOL 'EM, $6.00, $3.60; DARK WAR, $3.20.

DEDICATION was rated along back of the pace for the first three furlongs, moved up stoutly when called upon and wearing down FOOL 'EM, drew out steadily in the last furlong. FOOL 'EM was prominent all the way, disposed of DARK WAR for the lead and despite holding on well, was unable to cope with the challenge of the winner. DARK WAR was prominently placed in the entire trip, although unable to keep pace with the leaders in the closing drive.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:04. Winner, Brandon Stable's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TUTTICURIO, $10.60, $5.40, $3.40; HIGH TORQUE, $5.50, $3.50; PRINCE DANNY, $3.10.

TUTTICURIO, under punishment early in an effort to keep up, was steadied along back of the pace, drove through on the inside at the stretch turn when the leaders went wide and continuing gamely outlasted HIGH TORQUE at the end. The latter had speed from the start, met determined opposition from PRINCE DANNY, carried him wide at the stretch turn and fought it out with good energy to the end. PRINCE DANNY was forwardly placed all the way and held on stubbornly in the drive despite being forced to lose ground at the stretch turn.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:31½. Winner, Medway Stable's b. f. (3), by Stars and Bars—Tze-Lei. Trained by George Alexandra. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY TICHNER, $15.70, $6.00, $3.50; SWIVELNECK, $5.30, $3.20; SUN PILOT, $2.80.

LADY TICHNER avoided the early pace, racing restrained for the first six furlongs, moved up fast on the inside when called upon nearing the stretch, took command with a rush and opened up a safe lead and was never threatened. SWIVELNECK worked his way up gradually in the last half mile and closed with good energy. SUN PILOT, in closest chase of the pace, dropped back but came willingly in the stretch, passing tired horses.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:02. Off at 5:03½. Winner, Mrs. C. P. Lindner's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOP TAX, $7.90, $3.80, $2.60; LONE HAND, $3.50, $2.40; PEEDEEQUE, $2.40.

TOP TAX outran his field to the first turn, was steadied along after drawing clear, bore out in the stretch, but was soon straightened out and increased his advantage steadily through the last furlong. LONE HAND moved up gamely when called upon and finished with good energy through the stretch run. PEEDEEQUE, in nearest attendance of the leader early, faltered after going the first six furlongs, although never threatened for third.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:23. Off at 5:27. Winner, Medway Stable's b. c. MOLASSES BOB was rated along under a light restraint for the first half mile, moved up gamely on the inside after rounding the far turn, was fortunate in gaining clear sailing all the way and taking command nearing the stretch drew out steadily. MISS PECAN, reserved early, came willingly in the closing drive, although unable to endanger the winner. OUT OF STEP was well placed all the way and came again in the drive lasting for a dead heat.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:08. Off at 6:11. Winner, T. P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAKE IT, $11.80, $6.70, $4.20; COMEDA, $9.80, $5.60; SOLITARY, $6.00.

MAKE IT was steadied along back of the pace established by CALEB, wore the latter down for the command nearing the stretch and hard ridden to the end to hold COMEDA safe. The latter worked his way up gradually and held on willingly in the final drive. SOLITARY, restrained early, moved up stoutly when called upon and fought it out with good courage to the end.

Nazis Down Czech Davis Cup Players

Win Singles, Virtually Assured of Berth in Interzone Final.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 9.—Germany's tennis aces, Baron Gottfried von Cramm and Heinrich Henkel, virtually clinched a berth in the Davis Cup interzone finals against the United States today.

Facing Czechoslovakia in the European zone finals, the Germans walked off with both of the opening singles matches and thus need only one more victory, either in doubles or in the final two singles tests, to qualify for the interzone finals to be played at Wimbledon July 17, 19 and 20.

Henkel disposed of Ladislaus Hecht in straight sets, 6—1, 7—5, 7—5, but Von Cramm had to come from far behind to stop the towering Czech, Roderich Menzel. After dropping the first two sets, Von Cramm cut Menzey down at 3—6, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2.

Meanwhile, at London, Great Britain, defender of the cup, lost the services of George Patrik Hughes, who had been counted upon to team up with C. R. D. Tuckey in the doubles of the challenge round at Wimbledon July 24, 26 and 27.

Hughes was forced to withdraw from the team because of a breakdown following overexertion and strain. His place will be taken by Frank H. D. Wilde.

Ranger Wins 11th Straight 18-Mile Race

Rainbow, Yankee Trail; Navigator MacPhee Is Laid to Rest.

By the Associated Press.

Newport, R. I., July 9.—Undefeated Ranger, the sloop with which Harold S. Vanderbilt will defend the America's cup against T. O. M. Sopwith's second British challenger, Endeavour II, scored her eleventh straight victory today on an 18-mile windward-leeward course.

Ranger finished four minutes and seven seconds ahead of Chandler Hovey's Rainbow and seven minutes and 18 seconds ahead of Gerard B. Lambert's Yankee.

At the time of the race, funeral services were held for Capt. Donald MacPhee, Endeavour II's veteran navigator, who died yesterday after a lingering illness. His death deprived Sopwith of sailing lore gained through 40 years in windjammers

Six of Capt. MacPhee's shipmates were his bearers. Sopwith, members of his afterguard, and the crews of both Endeavour II and the old Endeavour, which failed to lift the cup in 1934, were among the mourners.

By today's victory, her third in a series of four races for a cup offered by George Nichols, former commodore of the New York Yacht Club, Ranger virtually clinched the trophy.

The summary:

Start 1:55 p. m. (E. S. T.); course 18 miles windward-leeward. Wind, at start, 7.2 southeast by south, and 8.4 southwest at finish.

Brescia Decision Protested by May

Bob May, manager of Alexandria's heavyweight, Bob Tow, yesterday filed formal protest over the decision rendered in favor of Jorge Brescia against his fighter at Griffith Stadium last Tuesday night.

May asked not only that the decision be reversed, but that "in the interest of the sport" neither Referee Robert (Muggsy) Morris nor Judge Bob Eller "be allowed to act as judges in other boxing contests in the District of Columbia."

"I am sure that this commission will appreciate the gravity of the situation when a young man who has spent many months in preparing himself for a boxing contest receives an adverse decision by a divided vote of the judges, when apparently 90 per cent of those present, including all of the sports writers, were of the opinion that he had clearly won."

The commission will decide the matter definitely at the next meeting, but an official poll of the officials yesterday revealed that none thought Tow had won, although one was of the opinion that a draw decision might not have been amiss.

Bees Defeat Phils Behind Jim Turner

Aged Rookie Wins 8th Victory, 5-0; Mayo Leads Attack.

Boston, July 9 (AP).—Only one of the Phillies reached second base today when Jim Turner, the 30-year-old freshman righthander, gave the Boston Bees their eleventh victory in their last 13 starts by pitching a five-hitter for a 5-0 shutout. The triumph was Turner's eighth of the season and his third in a row.

Eddie Mayo, striving to win the starting third-base assignment from the injured Gil English, led the Bees' attack with a double and two singles as they pounded starter Claude Passeau and Orville Jorgens for a total of nine hits.

George Scharein got two of the five singles made off Turner and he was the only one of the visitors to reach second, in the fifth when he hit safely and, with two out, was advanced by Leo Norris' one-base smash.

Browns Bow In Slugfest To Chicago

Drop 11-7 Game as 3 Pitchers Are Hit 18 Times

Chicago, July 9 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns dropped the opener of a four-game series to the White Sox today, 11 to 7, when the Chicago team piled up a total of 18 hits off three St. Louis pitchers.

The Sox tied the score three times and then drove Jim Walkup from the mound with a five-run blast in the seventh. Sheriff Blake and Tommy Thomas were the other two St. Louis pitchers.

The Browns knocked Bill Dietrich off the mound in the second inning, but were unable to do much with J. Duncan Rigney, who pitched the rest of the way.

Harry Heffner Wins Junior Tennis Title

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Wilmington, Del., July 9.—Harry Heffner's racquet was as hot as the weather today and the Washington netman, giving a superb performance from start to finish, subdued William Gillespie, of Atlanta, Ga., in straight sets in the final of the Delaware State Junior championship on the sun-parched courts of the DuPont Country Club. The scores were 6—3, 6—3, 6—4.

Driving relentlessly off his forehand and making repeated placements with cross-court shots that creased the lines, the No. 10 nationally ranked junior quickly took command of the match and, except for a brief lapse in the third set, kept Gillespie on the defense for the greater part.

Gillespie made his best showing in the second, fifth and sixth games of the set and in the early stages of the final tilt. The fifth game went to deuce four times before Heffner finally gained the deciding point, while the sixth reached even figures on three occasions.

Starting the third set, Gillespie gained a 4—1 advantage, but Heffner again took command to sweep the next five games, being extended in only two.

N.B.A. Rating Unit To See Steele Bout

The rating committee—most important division of the National Boxing Association—will attend the Freddie Steele-Hobo Williams bout at Griffith Stadium July 20.

The rating committee, which decides the status of champions and challengers in the 38 States and foreign countries in which the N. B. A. controls boxing, had been scheduled to meet here this week. The meeting was deferred so that the officials might see for themselves just what standing Williams has as a challenger for the middleweight crown now worn by Steele.

Army, Navy Teams Seek Leech Trophy

Best Tennis Players in Services Vie at Army-Navy Club at 2 P.M. Today.

With the Leech Tennis Trophy at stake, two service teams representing Uncle Sam's martial might of the land and sea will clash this afternoon in the eleventh renewal of the series of matches, begun in 1924, to determine the tennis supremacy between the personnel of the Army and Navy.

Just as their academy teams compete with a definite desire for victory, so will the teams of officers which clash on the Army-Navy Country Club courts today at 2 p. m. enter the competition.

Navy, winner of the last eight consecutive matches, the last held two years ago in 1935, is again favorite to triumph. But, led by Lieut. Dolf Muelheisen and Capt. Stanley K. Robinson, Army Air Corps fliers, the Army team is given a fair chance of victory.

The cup, donated by Abner Y. Leech, in 1924, and sought annually up to 1932, and again in 1935, represents the acme of achievement for a soldier or sailor team. The best players in the services are chosen to compete for it, and it has been won by Navy with a regularity that would do credit to the record of any other Navy team over it's traditional foe.

Lieut. John K. McCue, No. 1 man of the Admiral squad, will meet Lieut. Muelheisen, Army champion, and No. 1 team player, in the feature match of the day. Three other singles matches and as many doubles matches complete the match.

The Navy team is composed of Lieuts. R. W. Dole. W. E. Howard, jr., G. W. Smith and C. A. Johnson, in addition to McCue.

Muelheisen, the Army's playing captain, is playing with Capt. Stanley K. Robinson, Capt. James Andrew, Lieut. William Robertson, Capt. James A. Drake, Staff Sergt. Samuel Lapsley and Lieut. P. K. Morrill, jr.

Mrs. Stokes and Helen Dettweiler Win Match

Mrs. Stokes and Miss Helen Dettweiler won a 1-up special golf match yesterday from Miss Marion Brown and Mrs. Charlotte Stearns at the Army and Navy Country Club.

The lowest best-ball score recorded was 72 carded by the winning team, the losers chalking up a 73. Miss Brown scored a 78, Miss Dettweiler an 80, Mrs. Stern an 81 and Mrs. Stokes an 82.

Close Play Marks Girls Net Tourney

No Upsets Recorded as Playground Event Gets Under Way.

Favorites advanced without upset yesterday as the first flock of opening-round matches in the girls' singles tournament conducted by the Department of Playgrounds, got under way at Chevy Chase, Twin Oaks, Rosedale and Takoma Park playgrounds.

While none of the ranking players was scheduled in the first day's play, several newcomers established themselves as threats for the title vacated by Willie O'Steen, of Virginia avenue. Viola Collins, of Georgetown, went three torrid sets to defeat Harriet Gordon, of Montrose in a match played at Chevy Chase. The scores were 6—4, 3—6, 6—6, with Miss Collins' steadiness proving the telling factor in the last set.

Additional first-round matches are scheduled today, with Hazel Bishopp, of Takoma Park, a semi-finalist last year, and Irma Williard of the same playground getting their first taste of action. Miss Williard, who meets Quinta Herbert, of Hamilton, was in the final round of eight last summer. Miss Bishopp's opponent is Peggy Leneries, of New York avenue.

Results of yesterday's matches—At Chevy Chase: Viola Collins (Georgetown) defeated Harriet Gordon (Montrose), 6—4, 3—6, 8—6; Agnes Percy (Georgetown) defeated Betty Faulkner (Janney), 6—0, 6—0; Anna Leigus (Georgetown) defeated Louise Gordon (Montrose), 6—0, 6—1; Joan Beadle (Chevy Chase) defeated Rosemary Bell (Janney), 6—0, 6—0; Emma Dorr (Hearst) defeated Virginia Beane (Janney), 9—7, 6—0; Dorothy Barclay (Montrose) defeated Nancy Crowser (Hearst), 6—1, 6—2.

At Takoma Park—Willie Lake (Twin Oaks) defeated Bernice Grolman (Park View), 4—6, 6—2, 6—2; Helen McDaniels (Georgetown) defeated Josephine Grober (Raymond), 6—0, 6—1; Marie Forti (New York Avenue) defeated Marion Wolford (McMillan) 6—0, 6—0; Eleanor Yoder (Raymond) defeated Mable Wyatt (Takoma), 6—1, 6—2.

At Twin Oaks: Margaret Gray (Twin Oaks) defeated Rose Klingenhagen (Bancroft), 6—0, 6—0; Rita Levy (New York Avenue) defeated Catherine Butler (McMillan), 6—0, 6—0; Mary Agnes Bier (Bancroft) defeated Celeste Buehler (Hamilton).

At Chevy Chase—At 9:30, Phyllis Strout (Gallinger) vs. Helen Burgess (Janney); Shirley Combs (Happy Hollow) vs. Molly Bogar (Gallinger); Mary Provost (Gallinger) vs. Mary Klingenhagen (Bancroft); at 10:30, Shirley Puffer (Chevy Chase) vs. Joan Provost (Gallinger); Betty Allen (Hearst) vs. Jean Stuart (Gallinger).

At Takoma Park—At 9:30, Hazel Bishopp (Takoma Park) vs. Peggy Lenneries (New York Avenue); Irma Williard (Takoma Park) vs. Qunita Herbert (Hamilton).

At Twin Oaks—At 9:30, Mary Gray (Twin Oaks) vs. Mary Burner (Hamilton).

Nats Swamped, 16-2, as Kuhel, Powell Battle

me until one of our guys yelled 'Look out!' from our bench.

Powell was fuming as he took his shower.

"They were trying to get me all day. Buddy Myer kicked me on a force play at second base in the fifth, and Kuhel tried to rip me at first in the second inning. I gotta protect myself out there and I'm gonna."

Myer denied that he had kicked at Powell on the play at second base, but he didn't deny that he was not throwing the ball at Powell's head in an attempt to complete a double play. The Nats' second-baseman's aim toward first was not so good on the play and the ball barely did miss Powell's conk.

After the game, the Nats were still furious. Threats to "get" Powell were heard all over the premises and one infielder declared, "I won't miss the next time."

Fans Applaud.

In striking contrast to the pop-bottle shower which greeted Powell after his mixup with Kuhel in Washington, the Yankee outfielder was thunderously cheered by New York fans today as he left the field on orders from the umpires.

The weather and Joe DiMaggio were hot this afternoon. The temperature, 94 degrees, had the fans in a continual sweat and DiMaggio had the Washington pitchers in a continual sweat.

The long-limbed Italian outfielder of the Yanks, who is leading the American League home-run race, added two more homers to his record today—his twenty-first and twenty-second. He had a hand, or rather, a bat, in 10 of those 16 Yankee runs, driving in 7 and scoring 4 himself.

The Yankees—alias the American League All-Stars—unloosed a murderous hitting display against Carl Fischer and Ed Linke and made a farce of the ball game with their 17 hits. DiMaggio rapped out five safeties—two homers, a triple, a double and a mere single, and Lou Gehrig put in his oar with a home run and a pair of singles.

Pearson in Form.

Monte Pearson, who had not pitched since June 29 when he came down with a sore elbow, was in perfect health this afternoon out there on the mound for the Yankees. He gave the Nats a run in the first inning and another in the eighth, but no more. The Nats made 11 hits when they weren't striking out or popping up.

Washington's one-run lead in the first inning which resulted from consecutive singles by Kuhel, Stone and Travis, lasted no longer than it required DiMaggio to get to bat. Because he smacked one of Fischer's pitches for a 420-foot homer into the leftfield stands.

The game began to get out of hand in the third when Pearson singled, Rolfe tripled to center, DiMaggio tripled to center and Gehrig singled to right. That made it 4-1. Fischer couldn't weather the next inning and Linke was called in. Linke passed DiMaggio with the bases filled to force in a run and then pitched a single to Gehrig that scored two more. The fourth run of the inning came home when Gehrig's smash got away from Almada.

But it was in the sixth that the Yankees turned on their greatest display of power. DiMaggio greeted Linke with his twenty-second home run into his favorite leftfield seats and the next hitter, Lou Gehrig, collected home run No. 14 with a booming shot into the rightfield stands. That made it 11-1, if you are still interested.

Batters Have Field Day At Pitchers' Expense

Major league pitchers wilted under a generally terrific heat and an equally terrific shelling as batsmen proving the two-day lay-off entailed by the All-Star game had sharpened rather than dulled their batting eyes, returned with one of the most prolific scoring days of the current season.

Pitchers were ducking all afternoon as hitters led by Joe DiMaggio, who pestered the Washington throwers with five for five, including two home runs, a triple, double and a single, rolled up an aggregate of 128 runs and 205 hits. When the final recapitulation was made it was found that an 8-7 game was a mound duel and players securing three hits were as numerous as Democrats in Congress.

Wheat Tumbles As Rain Brings Canada Relief

Record-Breaking Domestic Receipts Also a Bear Factor.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago July 9.—Tumbles of wheat prices, 3½ cents a bushel, maximum, resulted largely today from some moisture relief in Canada and from continued record-breaking domestic receipts.

Tending also to pull wheat vaules down were correct assertions prevalent that the United States Government crop report due after the close of today's trading would figure the 1937 domestic winter crop yield as larger than any official estimate heretofore this year.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were 1⅝@2⅛ cents under yesterday's finish: July, 1.22⅜; September, 1.23⅜@1.23½; December, 1.25⅝@1.25¾. Corn, 1⅜ off to 1⅛ up; July, 1.28⅛@1.28¼; September, 1.14⅝@1.14⅞; December, 84⅛@84⅝. Oats, ⅛@⅜ down; September, 38½@38⅝, and Rye 1¼@2½ drop; September, 88. Provisions results were unchanged to 12 cents lower.

Lehman Corp. Assets $40.18 Per Share Net

New York, July 9 (AP).—Lehman Corporation today reported net asset value of its 2,081,580 capital shares resulting from the recent three-for-one split-up was $40.18 a share as of June 30.

Net earnings for the fiscal year ended June 30, including net realized profits on investments computed on the basis of average cost, totaled $12,497,339. Dividends declared and paid during the year aggregated $9,790,167.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Hold Steady in Less Active Trading; Wheat Declines; Cotton Is Higher.

New York, July 9.—With stock trading volume falling under a million shares, the smallest turnover in a week, prices moved sluggishly but closed higher for the most part. Changes were narrow. Cotton advanced further on the smaller planting estimate, but wheat had a setback. September wheat futures at Chicago closed 2⅛ cents lower at 123⅝ cents a bushel.

With nothing much but the thermometer to read the financial district found its enthusiasm for anything running sluggishly. The pace of the stock market slackened as the heat increased, but the buying orders continued more urgent than the selling and the tone held steady. Short term traders apparently thought that six or seven days of advancing prices would prove to be insurance of a decline, and in the first trading the volume of profit taking was enough to send many stocks down from fractions to over a point.

Among the early losers were Steel, Chrysler, Central, General Motors, Santa Fe, and Union Pacific. Steel was the first to recover and most of the day was spent on top of 109. Railroad shares also stiffened a little with the official report on car loadings for last week, showing a considerable gain. The heat here emphasized reports of drought conditions in parts of the West. Expectation of higher farm prices pushed further the shares of farm implements and mail orders. A feature of the implement class was Oliver, which jumped more than 5 points. Caterpillar also was strong, along with Allis Chalmers.

Late Selling.

Here and there a little selling took place in the last hour, but the pressure was resisted well. After dropping nearly a point from its early afternoon best price, Steel rebounded to a new high price for the recovery. General Electric also reached its best price in the last hour. Contrary to some expectations, the so-called hot weather stocks did little or nothing, including Coca-Cola, Canada Dry and White Rock. Owens Glass and Monsanto Chemical rose 2 to 3 points.

Foods, rubbers, chemicals, oils and utilities were mixed. Chesapeake Corporation, the Alleghanies and Chesapeake & Ohio lost ground. Many seeming price disparities under the proposed merger plan developed, but the general uncertainties of completion prevented arbitrageurs from growing active.

On the money front no changes took place. Government bonds softened a trifle, but other sections were steady and quiet. Short-term money rates have nothing in sight to harden them and inertia more than anything else rules among gilt edged bonds.

Foreign Exchange.

Foreign exchanges were a shade firmer. Support for the franc was found after its late dip yesterday and the price recovered from the effects of the revelation that the Bank of France had lost so much gold in the recent crisis that its reserve was under the traditional sum of 50,000,000,000 francs regarded as a war chest minimum. France is now more likely to buy gold than to lose it, for a while at least, and the next crisis may not be seen until about the time when arrangements must be made for meeting the heavy October maturities.

Credit changes reported by the weekly Federal Reserve statement were those dictated by the midyear operations. Circulation rose sharply under holiday demands and while member bank reserves went down, excess reserves rose a little with a fall in deposits. New York City member banks reported a heavy drop in demand deposits, in Government deposits and a further rise in foreign deposits. The banks here also sold more Government securities.

Brokers' Loans.

Another of those not so infrequent mistakes made by the wielders of pencils and the operators of counting machines in the bank occurred last week with the reporting of a brokers' loan total some $21,000,000 too low. That turned a small decline in loans into a small increase, which was wiped out this week with a $20,000,000 drop, the washing out of the special borrowings around the year end. The only significance to the revised figures is that, after all, the midyear maintained its tendency to see a rise in brokers loans as a means of financing operations at that time and of anticipating interest and dividend payments to be used for reinvestment. All now is according to Hoyle.

N. Y. Heat Exhausts Gen. Elec. Fan Supply

New York, July 9 (AP).—As intense heat continued today General Electric Co. announced that its distributors' stock of electric fans in Greater New York was entirely in the hands of dealers. Retail sales in the New York area were reported as 50 per cent ahead of last year.

Unemployment Cut 2 Million In 5 Months

May Total of 6,246,000 Jobless Is Lowest Since 1930.

New York, July 9.—Unemployment in the United States declined between April and May by more than 600,000 persons to a total in the latter month of 6,246,000 according to the latest report of the National Industrial Conference Board.

This number, constituting the lowest total for any month since the winter of 1930 marks a decrease since January of this year of more than two million persons.

The May unemployment total compares with 6,876,000 in April and 7,415,000 in March of this year and with 8,675,000 in May, 1936, according to the conference board.

The decline in unemployment between April and May was due largely to the increase in employment of 421,000 workers in agriculture, 75,000 workers in construction, 32,000 workers in manufacturing, and lesser amounts in individual fields of enterprise.

Total employment in May aggregated 46,697,000 workers of whom 35,240,000 were employed in non-agricultural and 11,457,000 in agricultural pursuits. The May total of 11,824,000 workers employed in manufacturing reflected a gain of nearly five million persons compared with July, 1932, the low point for this field of enterprise. The May total according to the conference board was almost a half a million greater than during September, 1929, the highest month of employment in that year, when 11,371,000 workers were engaged in manufacturing activities of all kinds.

Between March, 1933, the month of low ebb of employment in all fields of activity, and May of this year there has been an increase in employment of 11,111,000 workers.

‡Matured bonds. Negotiability impaired pending investigation.

Other securities are admitted to dealing as "unlisted" on application of a regular member and approval by the listing committee and the board of governors.

Rates of dividends in the foregoing table are annual disbursements based on the last quarterly or semi-annual declaration. Unless otherwise noted, special or extra dividends are not included.

XD—Ex-dividend. EX—First sale since ex-dividend date or dates. XR—Ex-rights. (a) Also extra or extras. (b) Including extra or extras. (e) Paid last year. (f) Payable in stock. (g) Declared or paid so far this year; no regular rate. (h) Cash or stock. (k) Accumulated dividends paid or declared this year. (ur) Under rule. (ww) With warrants. (xw) Without warrants. (war) Warrants.

Foreign Markets.

London, July 9.—The stock market closed steady and speculative interests were active. Home rails and transatlantic shares moved higher and steels and tobacco issues were in good demand. Foreign bonds remained quiet while the oil, mining and gilt-edged divisions were active and firm.

Paris.—Industrial shares were generally weak at the close of the bourse today. Rentes finished unchanged to 50 centimes net higher and coal shares also sold higher. Suez Canal lost 320 francs on the day and royal Dutch declined 135 francs.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed firm ½d to 2d higher on expectations of better milling demand, decreased stocks afloat and a better spot demand. The small American cotton acreage reports helped sentiment in the cotton futures market, but local buying encountered Bombay selling and the market closed 1 to 2 points net higher.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Treasury of July 7: $84,962,139.22; balance, $2,520,987,1[illegible]4; customs receipts for the month $7,3[illegible]857.12.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $125,817,177.93; expenditures, $271,327,756.31 (including $46,359,868.45 of emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures, $145,510,578.38; gross debt, $38[illegible]535,071,336.15, an increase of $1,334,452.19 over the previous day; gold assets, $12,375,902,563.03, including $1,164,510,743.67 of inactive gold.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, July 9 (AP).—The wool market continued quiet today. Few inquiries were received. Quotations on spot wools were fully maintained. Good French combing length fine territory wools in original bags were quoted mostly $3@97 cents, scoured basis, for spot supplies. Short French and clothing length fine territory wools in original bags were available for $1@93 cents, scoured basis.

Auction Sales

THURSDAY, JULY 15, 1937—
ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF TWO-STORY DETACHED FRAME DWELLING, EIGHT ROOMS, TWO BATHS, FURNACE HEAT, NO. 3817 MORRISON STREET NORTHWEST, WITH TWO-CAR GARAGE.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 6793, folio 7, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises, on THURSDAY, THE FIFTEENTH DAY OF JULY, 1937, AT FOUR-FORTY O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to wit: Lot 35 and the East 16 feet 8 inches by the full depth thereof of Lot 36 in Square 1859, in Fulton R. Gordon's subdivision of part of "Chevy Chase," now known as "Connecticut Avenue Terrace," as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber County 21 at folio 33; subject to the building restriction line shown on said plat. Subject to the right of redemption by the makers of the aforesaid deed of trust, their heirs and assigns, within a period of sixty days from the date of sale, not excluding Sundays and holidays, as provided in said deed of trust.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in one and two years, with interest at 5 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semi-annually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $500.00 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within ten days from expiration of redemption period; otherwise, trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.
